Fatal Traffic Crash Follows Reconciliation

Two Lives Claimed In Fox Valley Area Accidents Saturday

An Illinois woman who had just made a reconciliation with her divorced husband and a New Holstein woman were killed in separate crashes in the Fox Valley area Saturday.

Mrs. Catherine Bader, 53, New Holstein, was killed when the auto her husband was driving crashed into a utility pole on State 57 just south of Green Bay.

Mrs. Isabelle Gehrke, 61, Wilmette, Ill., was killed almost instantly in a near head-on crash on U. S. 45 a mile south of Hortonville at 4:15 p.m. Saturday.

She had settled differences with her ex-husband, Richard A. Gehrke, New London, just five minutes before the accident, Gehrke told Outagamie Coroner Bernard H. Kemps.

Sister's Home
Gehrke said she was returning to the home of her sister, Olive Emerson, Oshkosh, where she had been staying when the crash occurred. Gehrke said he and his ex-wife had been planning an Easter meal at Mrs. Gehrke's sister's home today, and the couple was going to marry soon.

Outagamie Sheriff Calvin Spice said Mrs. Gehrke's auto met almost head-on with an auto being driven by Donald B. Baniszewski, 31, route 1. He said the cars met in the center of the highway.

Baniszewski is reported in good condition at New London Community Hospital with a broken right ankle, knee cuts, severe facial lacerations and possible fractured ribs. Kemps said Mrs. Gehrke suffered crushing chest injuries.

Tried to Avoid Crash
Spice said skid marks indicated that Baniszewski's auto had been traveling in his left lane. Mrs. Gehrke was steering her auto into her left lane to avoid a crash and Baniszewski was turning back into his right lane when the autos collided.

Kemps said Baniszewski had no legal driver's license, and his last license was revoked when his insurance lapsed. He said he will confer with District Atty. Nick Schaefer on possible charges and an inquest into Mrs. Gehrke's death.

Mrs. Gehrke's body was taken to Cline and Hansen Funeral Home in New London. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Mrs. Bader was pronounced dead at St. Vincent Hospital about 10:30 p.m. Brown County Coroner Cletus Belisle said she suffered severe head injuries.

Mrs. Bader's husband, Richard, about the same age, suffered undetermined injuries and was undergoing treatment at the same hospital. His injuries were not believed serious.

145 Hurt in Jap Train Smashup

TOKYO (AP) — An express passenger rumbled into the rear of another passenger train at Nagoya, central Japan, today and first reports said at least 145 were injured.

Police said the one train was stopped at the station when it was hit by the express, which was slowing for its own stop. Both were crowded with holiday passengers.

Early reports said there were no deaths and the relatively slow speed of the ramming train was believed to have prevented a major disaster.

Kyodo News Service, reporting from Nagoya, 175 miles southwest of Tokyo, said ambulances sped injured passengers to 11 different hospitals in the 1.6 million population city.

Tidal Waves Bring Fears in Hawaii, Japan

At Least 11 Drown Along California And Oregon Coasts

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Racing tidal waves spawned by Friday night's violent Alaskan earthquake:

Drowned at least 11 persons in Oregon and California; left six missing and injured scores; Spread damage down the West Coast of North America; Caused city evacuations in Hawaii and Japan;

Overtaken boats in the Gulf of Mexico.
Crescent City, Calif., 340 miles north of San Francisco on the Pacific Coast, appeared to be the hardest hit. The backwash of a creek fed by the tidal wave action rolled five-foot-high waves into the town. There was no warning.

Family Tragedy
Bodies of 10 who drowned were recovered. Three persons were missing. Fifty-nine were injured. All 150 downtown stores were damaged. Power lines short-circuited by the water touched off big gasoline plant fires.

At Beverly Beach State Park, near Depoe Bay, Ore., 80 miles southwest of Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Monte McKenzie and four children were camping out in sleeping bags. One child drowned, the other three are missing.

Plane Vanishes Over Pacific With 9 Aboard

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A military charter plane with one engine afire vanished Saturday over the Pacific. Nine men were aboard.

The four-engine DC4, inbound from Wake Island via Honolulu, radioed for ditching instructions just before it went silent at 5:55 a.m. It had only enough gasoline to fly until 10:47 a.m.

The Coast Guard dispatched search planes to the area, approximately 1,000 miles southwest of San Francisco. Many hours later, their reports were all negative — no trace of the missing aircraft.

Six hours after the pilot asked for ditching instructions, indicating he was planning to bring his big propeller-driven ship down at sea, the Federal Aviation Agency listed the DC4 as day for an investigation of the spread of food prices.

Long-range Coast Guard planes were over the ocean area consumers' pay. The emphasis and Panama. Said he is planning to visit At one of his surprise Saturdays pockets of poverty and unemployment.

What's Happened to Old Friends, Familiar Places in Anchorage?

BY CHARLES HOUSE
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

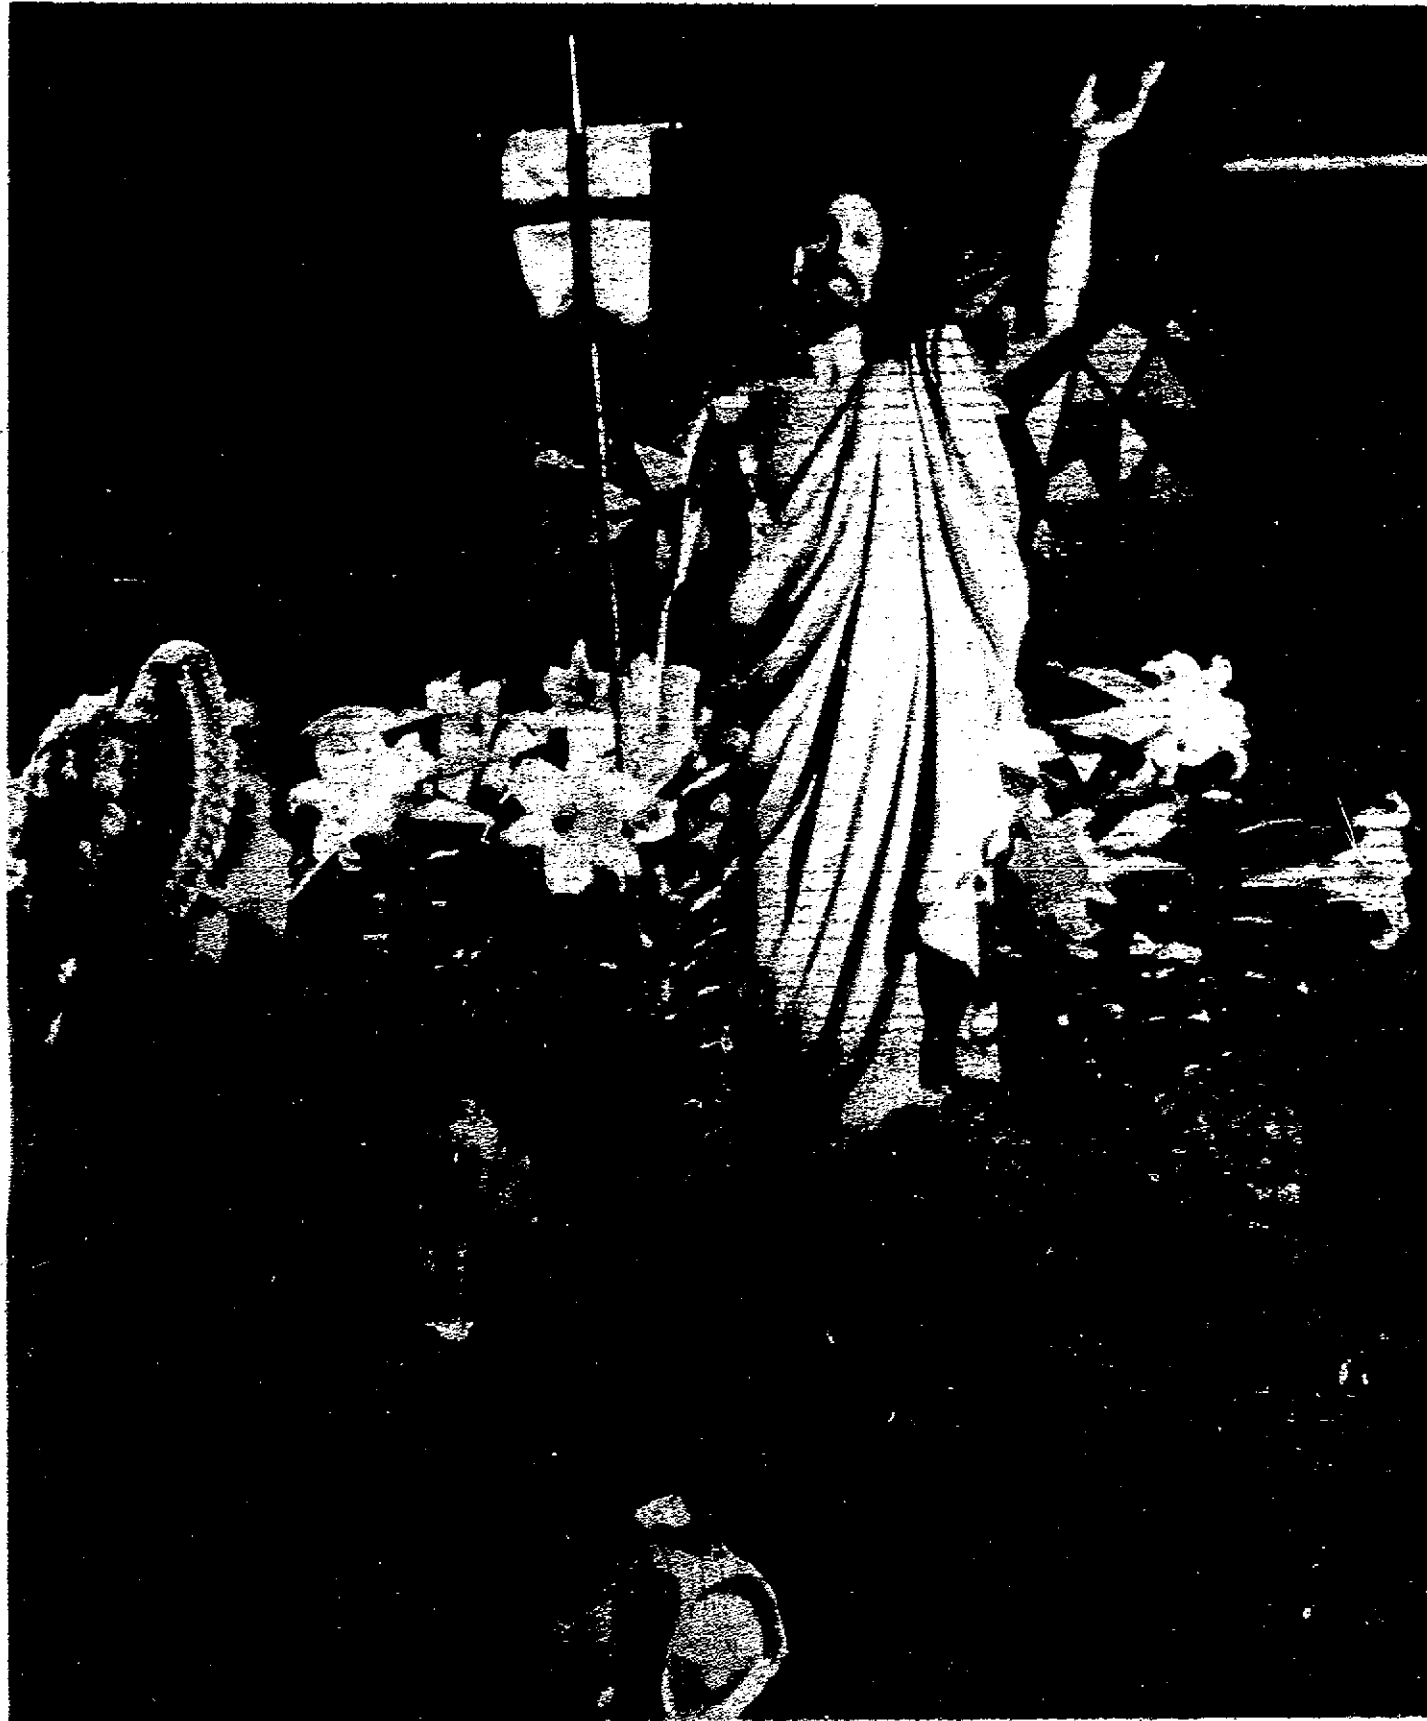

In human tragedies, one thinks in broad terms. How many dead? How many dollars? How much damage? How much grief?

But a great tragedy is only great because it is made of many smaller ones, and today Alaska has raised its voice of anguish to outpour the walls of Texas.

It will be heard. I have walked the streets of Anchorage and I cannot think in the wide terms of a single great tragedy which encompasses all of the many.

I think of the one and one-and-a-half story buildings on Fourth and Fifth Avenues, the two main streets of Anchorage, the largest city of Alaska. They are all but leveled.

But I wonder what has become of Bill Hammersley, and old sourdough who came

Study to Be Made
One announcement was that where a road ends and a turn-off, the President was preparing to ask Congress for legislation to create a bipartisan commission of 15 to study changes he said are taking place in the food industry.

As an illustration of what the commission would get at, Johnson cited this situation: "We have some commodities today where the producer is receiving 25, 30 per cent less and the housewife who is in Rome, a spokesman for paying 25 or 30 per cent more."

President Declares State Major Disaster Area and Pledges All Possible Aid

Alaska counted its dead and the marshaled forces to care for the Hawaiian Islands, without making Saturday amid wide-spread devastation from one of the state's mightiest earthquakes, lapped Japan and Siberia.

President Johnson declared Anchorage as rescue workers and pledged all the government's resources in providing in freezing foggy weather.

The known death toll still was surprisingly low. Fears it would mount into the hundreds were diminishing.

The governor's office in undamaged Juneau reported that fatalities may not exceed 50.

Anchorage, Alaska's largest city with a population of nearly 100,000 in the metropolitan area, took the brunt of the great Good Friday shock which struck at 5:36 p.m.—10:36 p.m. (EST).

Smaller Cities Hit
Giant seismic sea waves generated by the quake smashed into half a dozen smaller cities rimming the Gulf of Alaska south of here and on Kodiak Island, causing death and destruction.

The waves raced on, leaving a trail of devastation down the Pacific Coast from Canada to California.

In the worst of the distant wave disasters, at least 10 died and 50 were missing in Crescent City, Calif., more than 2,000 miles from the quake. The epicenter of the shock was about 150 miles southeast of Anchorage.

One child drowned and three were missing when the seas caught a Tacoma, Wash., family.

Clinic Probes Problem Of Dropouts at Colleges

This put the 44-year-old Carey three up on Rep. Bob Carey, D-Tex., who with 10 children is the second proudest father in Congress.

The Carey roll call: Alexandria, 18; Christopher, 16; Suzan, 15; Peter, 14; Hugh Jr., 12; Michael, 10; Donald, 9; Marieanne, 8; Nancy, 7; Helen, 5; Bryan, 3; Paul, 16 months and, of course Kevin.

BY ALTON BLAKESLEE — Joe swept through high school with good grades and his senior class voted him the boy most likely to succeed.

That fall he marched off to college happily enough. But six weeks later he fled home, one more youngster in a huge and worrisome army of college

Some students had always dropped out of anything when the going got rough. A few apparently were inevitably headed for psychotic episodes, wherever they were. While some students who make poor grades enlist enough sympathy to get by, others manage to antagonize the school enough so they are dropped.

Good Training

Presiding over a family of this size, Carey said was good training for his political career. Where else are you faced with an hourly peace-keeping mission and the problem of not playing favorites?

Carey says his greatest sacrifice as a member of Congress is not being able to spend all the time he wants with his family.

He is a member of the House Education and Labor Committee, one of the most active in Congress, and says he is under a virtual mandate to visit his congressional district at least once weekly.

With 13 children, Carey admitted, there's not much for luxuries but there are some economies. Take the milk machine, for example.

Instead of delivering milk in quarts — the family uses between 90 and 110 quarts weekly — the milkman brings six-gallon cans which are connected to a dispensing machine.

All the kids have to do is to dropouts.

Each year, one million American youths begin college. Before graduation day, more than half have quit.

Some lack money, some lack talent. But, by some estimates, at least half drop out because of emotional problems.

Now a special college dropout clinic has turned up clues to some of these reasons, as a first step toward preventing personal tragedies and waste of trained brainpower to run the nation's affairs.

The clinic at the William Alanson White Institute here has treated 43 college dropouts, both men and women, during the last two years.

One third have successfully resumed college fulltime, and nearly as many are back in classes parttime, says Dr. Edgar A. Levenson, director of the dropout clinic.

Among reasons for dropping out — which may also apply to high school dropouts — clinic investigators found:

Startling Find

One quite startling finding, Dr. Levenson said, is that 25 percent of the fathers of dropouts had themselves dropped out of college. The depression years had forced some to quit, but others stopped for a variety of other reasons.

Seventeen per cent of fathers had run into career setbacks, and 16 per cent were disappointed in their own careers. In about a quarter of the homes, the father was gone, through death, separation or divorce.

In many cases, mothers saw their children merely as extensions of themselves, rather than separate individuals, and when the child failed, they wailed. "What have I done?"

Other mothers were reluctant really to let their children go. The dropout may then be seen as a symbolic act of rebellion and separation from the family, and, at the same time, a regression and return to an earlier, less stressful relationship with the mother.

Threat of Violence Hovers in Canada

Terrorists Mar French Move for More Provincial Autonomy

Hope Raised for Atomic Station In Wisconsin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says action by the Senate House Atomic Energy Committee in approving an authorization of $1 million for Northwestern University Research Association for MURA staves off disaster for the MURA scientific team.

MURA had proposed construction of a giant accelerator near Madison, Wis., but President Johnson last December ruled against inclusion of funds for this in the budget for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Proxmire said the committee doubled the budgeted $500,000 for MURA.

"The action of the joint committee is no smashing victory for MURA," Proxmire said. "It does, however, keep our hopes alive. We may now be able to win the survival of this top group of Midwest scientists as a team."

MURA includes scientists from all Big Ten universities and several other Midwest schools.

Proxmire said Thursday Johnson's decision indicated at demands without upsetting the other provinces is a delicate task. Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson has said: "The whole of Canada is greater than the hand in the distance while driving of its parts." In Quebec this statement was interpreted as meaning "He's saying it's better than we are."

To the young extremist in Montreal, the choice is "indeed, a pendulum or death."

Kelly, Mahovich Star as Leafs Even Series at Win Each

MONTREAL (AP) — Red Kelly and Frank Mahovich collaborated on back-to-back goals in the first period and the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Montreal Canadiens 2-1 Saturday night to square their Stanley Cup semifinal series at one victory apiece.

Kelly, a 36-year-old veteran appearing in his 130th post-season game, and super-star Mahovich each scored during a four-minute span. The Leafs, defending Cup champions, held on behind Johnny Bower's brilliant goaltending.

Jean Beliveau thwarted Bower's shutout bid when he scored the Canadiens' goal on a second-period power play.

Kelly converted a Mahovich pass at 8:50 of the opening period and set up his linemate's decisive goal at 12:03. Leafs captain George Armstrong also assisted on Mahovich's tally.

Beliveau connected for Montreal at 15:29 of the middle period, just 10 seconds after Toronto's Eddie Shack drew a two-minute penalty for boardchecking. John Ferguson and Bernie Geoffrion drew assists.

The 12 penalties levied by referee Art Skov were in marked contrast to Thursday's bruising first game, when Frank Udvari called 31 infractions.

Bower turned away 22 Montreal shots, three less than Canadiens goalie Charlie Hodge. Beliveau's goal was his 41st in Stanley Cup competition. Kelly, in his 17th National Hockey League season, has scored 27 playoff goals and Mahovich has netted 17.

The best-of-seven games series shifts to Toronto for Tuesday's third contest as well as games 4 and 5.

Makes Big Plays in Final 1:45; Murrell Scores 20 Points

BY KELSO STURGEON

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Wichita's Dave Stallworth came up with all the big plays in the last 1:45 of play Saturday to lead the West to a 79-78 victory over the East in the College All-Star basketball game.

With 1:45 to go Stallworth stole the ball, drove in for a basket, was fouled and made two free throws to put the West ahead 77-75.

With 43 seconds to go Wichita's All-American stole the ball again and scored on a 10-foot jumper to give the West a three-point margin 79-76. The East managed two free throws by John Thompson of Providence in the next 15 seconds. Then the West took the ball and stalled it for the last 28 seconds.

The shorter East team carried the fight through most of the first half and led by as much as six points. But the West battled back to tie it up 43-43 at halftime.

Takes Control

The East, with Fred Hetzel of Davidson leading the way, took control again early in the second half and moved out to a five-point lead, 57-52. The West tied it up 57-57 on a basket by Stallworth and about one minute later went ahead 61-59 on a field goal by Wayne Estes of Utah State.

The West then led until Jeff Mullins of Duke hit a 10-foot jumper with 1:54 to go to tie it up. At this point Stallworth took over.

Willie Murrell, a 6-foot-6 jumping jack from Kansas State, was the game's high scorer with 20 points. Stallworth finished the game with 15 and Joe Caldwell of Arizona State had 13.

Ron Bonham of Cincinnati and Hetzel finished with 15. Mullins with 12 and All America Cotton Nash of Kentucky had 10.

The contest, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, was played for the benefit of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame at Springfield, Mass.

Ron Stone May Return to Foxes; Club Eyes Trio in Baltimore Camp

The Fox Cities Foxes captured a pair of recent games in the Baltimore Oriole farm club training base at Thomasville, Ga.

The Foxes, still far from the team that will represent the Fox Cities during the 1964 season, were turned back the Cal Ripken-managed Aberdeen Pheasants in both tilts. Ripken skipped the Foxes in 1962.

Manager Billy DeMars' roster of players will undergo numerous changes before the team breaks camp April 20. The "wild man" of the Baltimore organization, Steve Dalkowski, was on the team last week for the purpose of working out his arm trouble. Dalkowski left late in the week to join the Rochester club at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Foxes' officials are eyeing three players now in training with the parent Baltimore club that he is ready to play. He has at Miami, Fla. They are pitcher Pat McMahon and Jim Jan-Fox Cities.

McMahon had an 8-8 record for Waterloo in the Midwest League last year while Jankow had a 2-25 era in only 24 innings at Wellsville in the Pony League in 1963. Fiore hit .268 for Quincy last summer.

Stone May Return
It is too early to tell if any of last year's players will return, but there is a hint that Ron Stone might be back as an outfielder in 1964. "Stoney" belt .286 playing first base last year.

Outfielder Jim White, who had entered the service in February, 1970 will be narrowed to about 80, received a medical discharge on four clubs (The Foxes, Aberdeen, and has reported to camp. White, Stockton, and Elmira) reports his legs feel fine and mid-April.

Andre Rodgers Paces Chicago

Adcock Removed From Game With Muscle Pull

MESA, Ariz. (AP)—Shortstop Andre Rodgers scored four runs Saturday as the Chicago Cubs won their third straight Cactus League game, 10-6, from a blend of first and second string Los Angeles Angels.

Rodgers was on base four straight times with two singles, a double and shortstop Bobby Lucas' sixth inning error.

The Cubs combed loser Aubrey Gatewood and Bo Belinsky for 14 hits before veteran Paul Foytack retired them in order in the eighth.

Los Angeles outthundered the Cubs 3-1 as Dick Simpson, Chuck Vinson and Paul Schaaf, a Mesa youth attached to the Angels farm system, hit for the circuit. Leo Burke homered for the Cubs. Starter Fred Norman, a southpaw who pitched the first five innings, picked up the victory.

Joe Adcock, veteran Los Angeles first baseman, was removed from the game after batting in the second inning. Adcock suffered a muscle pull in his left shoulder and was taken to a hospital for X-rays, which proved negative.

Fisher Stars As Mets Tip Orioles, 3-2

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The New York Mets handed Baltimore's split squad its second defeat of the day by beating the Orioles 3-2 Saturday night in exhibition baseball.

The Washington Senators blanked another Baltimore squad 6-0 at Pompano Beach Saturday afternoon.

Baltimore was spared another shutout when Russ Snyder singled and John Powell doubled off rookie pitcher Ron Locke in the eighth inning. Brooks Robinson's 420-foot homer in the ninth accounted for the Orioles' second tally.

Former Oriole Jack Fisher hurled a scoreless five-inning against his old teammates through seven innings.

The Mets touched Mike McCormick for two runs in the second on a walk, a double by Joe Christopher, a sacrifice fly and a single by Larry Burroughs.

The winning run came off Steve Barber in the seventh inning on a walk, a sacrifice bunt and a single to center field by Dick Smith.

Ron Bonham of Cincinnati and Hetzel finished with 15. Mullins with 12 and All America Cotton Nash of Kentucky had 10.

The contest, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, was played for the benefit of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame at Springfield, Mass.

The Fox Cities Foxes captured a pair of recent games in the Baltimore Oriole farm club training base at Thomasville, Ga.

The Foxes, still far from the team that will represent the Fox Cities during the 1964 season, were turned back the Cal Ripken-managed Aberdeen Pheasants in both tilts. Ripken skipped the Foxes in 1962.

Manager Billy DeMars' roster of players will undergo numerous changes before the team breaks camp April 20. The "wild man" of the Baltimore organization, Steve Dalkowski, was on the team last week for the purpose of working out his arm trouble. Dalkowski left late in the week to join the Rochester club at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Bragan Undecided About Shortstop For Opening Day

Torre's 1964 Debut Postponed; Spahn Faces Cardinals Today

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Rumors have been making the rounds in Florida training camps that the Milwaukee Braves are trying to trade shortstop Roy McMillan for a starting pitcher, but Manager Bobby Bragan said Saturday, "We have nothing on the fire as far as I know."

Bragan would not commit himself on his choice between McMillan and Denny Menke as his opening day shortstop, saying, "Our shortstop problem is a nice one to have. I feel secure regardless of who happens to be out there."

The rainout of Saturday's exhibition with the Cincinnati Reds postponed catcher Joe Torre's starting debut after his long holdout. Torre will catch and Warren Spahn will attempt to go seven innings for the first time this spring when the Braves meet the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Petersburg today.

San Francisco Giants came up with three runs in the eighth inning Saturday for a 7-4 victory and their sixth straight exhibition win over the Cleveland Indians.

Victims of the eighth-inning rally was Pedro Ramos, the second of three Cleveland pitchers. The Giants, whose Cactus League record now stands at 15-5, got four hits off Ramos, including a triple by Jesus Alou.

Alou scored the tying run in the seventh inning, when he singled off Ramos, went to second on Del Crandall's single, moved up on a walk and tallied on a wild pitch.

Billy O'Dell, the third of four pitchers, was credited with the victory. He worked four innings and gave up two runs on three hits.

Dick Donovan, who has been troubled this spring with a sore arm, went the first five innings for Cleveland and held the Giants to one earned run and three singles.

Hutchinson said veterans Joe Nuxhall and Al Worthington will work today against the New York Yankees, who are expected to start Bill Stafford on the mound.

Another young Cincinnati pitcher—right-hander Dan Neville—was sent to the Reds' minor league training camp for re-assignment. Neville had a 13-9 record last season with Macon of the Sally League.

Keefe Lauds Lewellen

Former NFL Official Recalls Experiences

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY—Did you ever hear about the National Football League official who once used his pistol to ward off an irate crowd . . . who was a commentator on the radio during halftime of a game he was working . . . who got a thrill out of the game even though he had to be neutral and who . . .

The mystery man is James C. (Jim) Keefe, a public relations executive in Cincinnati. Keefe wrote to the late George W. (Cal) Calhoun, the former Packer secretary and publicity director, the other day relating some of his experiences as an official.

Since Early NFL Days

Keefe had been unaware that Cal had died last December. Cal and Keefe had been acquainted since the early days of the NFL and had corresponded down through the years.

The writer has informed Keefe of Cal's death . . . here is Keefe's letter to Cal:

"Your column on Verne Lewellen recalls one of the most hectic experiences I encountered in my officiating career. It was a game between the Packers and Bears in Chicago. Lewellen got off one of his many terrific punts and it bounced against the Bears' safety man's legs. One of your ends, it may have been Lavvie Dilweg, fell on the ball, and I awarded it to Green Bay against the violent protests of George Halas. On the first play, Red Dunn passed for the winning touchdown.

Schedules Announced

Viking Spring Sports Slate Opens April 7

Schedules for four Lawrence College spring sports have been announced by Bernie Heselson, athletic director.

Coaches for the sports include track, Gene Davis; baseball, Clyde Rusk; tennis, Ron Roberts, and golf, Heselson.

The Vike thinclads will open the conference season by playing host to Knox at Whiting Field April 11. The baseball squad will open April 7 at Oshkosh.

The tennis team will play two meets April 11, a morning match at Knox and an afternoon one at Monmouth.

The golf squad's first test will come April 15 at St. Norbert, while its first conference meet will be April 18 at Knox.

"When I fired the closing gun, crowds from the stands descended on me and I was a little fearful of what might happen. I twirled the pistol around as if to use it until I could reach the dugout and duck for the dressing room. Later, upstairs, Halas was pretty irate but soon cooled down. To his credit, George never tried to keep me out of subsequent games of his team as some other owners did."

Great Panther

"It may have been in that game that I saw Lewellen get off three of the greatest punts ever. Kicking for about 60 yards, he put two of them out of bounds on about the 2-yard line, and the third just over the end line in the coffin corner. I have always said that Verne was the greatest punter I ever saw in the National League. I think you will agree with me.

"One other Green Bay game I will never forget that in which Don Hutson played his first game for the Packers. I recall his catch of a Herber pass on the first play of the game and threading his way down the sidelines for the game's only touchdown. I had to follow him to be sure he did not go out of bounds, which he didn't. It is plays such as this which give anyone a thrill even though as an official he has to be neutral."

Quite a Chore

"Your mention of the fact that the National League had 45 officials in the 1963 season startled me. When I was working, I don't think we had more than 15. Joe Carr would send us an assignment card which we didn't get until about Tuesday before the game so you never knew beforehand where or when you would work.

"You'll remember that we were in at the start and knew the growing pains of those days. It deserves the great acclaim it has received and I do not think that the upstart American Football League will ever reach it. . . .

"During the games I officiated in Green Bay I became, I believe, the only NFL official who also was a half time commentator. Russ Winnie invited me to give a halftime comment of the action of the game. Nothing about the decisions of course, but a resume of the action as seen from the field."

Colt Errors Lead to Win For Pirates

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP)—Pittsburgh scored eight unearned runs as Houston committed six errors and beat the Colts 8-6 in an exhibition baseball game Saturday.

Joe Gibbon gave up all the Houston runs in the first five innings. He was tagged for two home runs by Jim Wynn which were good for three runs. Houston's Ernie Fazio added another homer.

Goes on 8-Birdie Binge; Gajda Second, One Stroke Behind

at the halfway mark of the 72-hole tournament that ends Monday. Al Besselink went on an eight-birdie binge Saturday to Tommy Jacobs, Bob Spence, shoot a second round 65 and Larry Mowry and Gene Briggs move into the 36-hole lead of the shared third place at 139, while $20,000 Azalea Open Golf Tour first round leader Joe Campbell named with a 135 total, fell to a seventh place tie at 140.

The strapping 39-year-old professional from Merchantville, N.J., held a one-stroke lead Besselink, returning to the over veteran Bob Gajda, who tournament trail after three holes to second place with his years of club pro duty in the second 63 for 135.

Besselink picked up $1,000 in his comeback by making the Gajda, 47-year-old pro playing missed by his way home to his Bloomfield Hills, Mich., club job, again had Finsterwald, two over the limit.

over-all standings. He credited a new swing with improving his play. "I used to be a puncher, a hand player," he explained. "Now I'm a swinger. I've got a swing that'll get the money. I never dreamed I could play as well as I have here. If I could win tournaments the way I used to hit the ball, this should be easy. It's like stealing."

The 6-foot-4, 200-pounder needed only 27 putts to get around the 6,744-yard Cape Fear Country Club course. One of two greens he missed, the eighth, brought his only bogey.

Three Birdies

On the front nine he had three birdies, the longest putt being a six-footer. He blazed home in 31 with five birdies, finishing with three consecutive threes. A 36-hole score of 145 was required to qualify 66 pros for the last two days of play. Prominent casualties were Jerry Barber, defending champion and events, the fourth entrant three-time winner here, who for the world series will be missed by two strokes; Billy Maxwell, one shot off; and Dow Finsterwald, two over the limit.

Set Dates For Third Golf 'Series'

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—The third annual World Series of Golf will be played at Firestone

Country Club here Sept. 12-13, it was announced Saturday. Competing will be winners of this year's Masters, U. S. and British Opens and PGA championship. The World Series winner will receive $50,000, with $15,000 going for second and $5,000 each for third and fourth places.

If a player wins more than one of the qualifying tournaments, the four-man field for the 36-hole medal play event will be assured by having defending champion Jack Nicklaus as first alternate. The second alternate will be the loser of a playoff in any of the major qualifying championships.

If Nicklaus should win one of the four major championships there are no ties in the tournament and events, the fourth entrant three-time winner here, who for the world series will be missed by two strokes; Billy Maxwell, one shot off; and Dow Finsterwald, two over the limit.

FVL Judo Club Will Compete Against ARD

30 Contestants Enter Second Annual Tourney

The second annual Fox Valley Lutheran High School Judo tournament, only judo tourney competition in the area this year, will be held at the FVL gym next Saturday.

The tournament is being sponsored by the FVL Judo Club, only high school judo organization in the state. Members of the Lutheran High Judo Club and the Appleton Recreation Department will compete, according to Gerald Mallmann, FVL Judo Club advisor.

Approximately 30 contestants from Appleton's two judo clubs will be competing in three different events. The tournament will be conducted under AAU rules, with competition being divided into four ranks: under 150 pounds, under 176 pounds, unlimited weight, and open.

Individual Matches
The program will open at 7:30 p.m. with individual matches in the first three groupings. After a shiai (contest) between the ARD team and the FVL squad, open matches, pitting judokas (judo players) of various weights, will take place.

After approximately 60 matches in all three events, the tournament judo champion will be crowned.

Members of the FVL Judo Club who will compete in the team match include Dan Krueger, captain; Jim and Fred Huebner, S. H. and Schneider, wend, and substitutes Peter Zuge and Darrow Mallmann.

FVL Graduate
Competing for the Recreation Department will be Dan Abitz, captain; Ron Herrman, Jim Sullivan, Jeri Cyfert, and Mike Mitas. Abitz, an FVL graduate, and Cyfert, a junior at Lutheran High, have been or are members of the FVL judo unit.

Allen Mills and Dave Schroeder, both advanced brown belts, will referee the shiai.

A breakdown of the rosters by weight shows the following judokas and their categories:

Under 150 pounds — Darrow Mallmann (120), Dan Krueger (140), and Fred Huebner (140), Fox Valley Lutheran.

Under 176 pounds — Mike Mitas (154), Jeri Cyfert (170), and Dan Abitz (172), Appleton Recreation Department; Jerry Huth (154) and Jim Huebner (155), Fox Valley Lutheran.

Unlimited weight — Elmer Coenen (180), Jim Sullivan (186) and Ron Herrman (210), Appleton Recreation Department; and Peter Zuge (200), Fox Valley Lutheran.

Open classification, in addition to the above: Larry Mueller and Roger Lemke, Fox Valley Lutheran.

Unique Sport
Judo is a unique sport in that there are four ways to win a bout by scoring an "ippon" or one point. An ippon is awarded when a contestant throws his opponent so that he strikes the mat on his back, when a contestant holds his opponent in an "osae-komi" (holding technique) for 30 seconds on the mat or when a contestant's strangle hold or arm lock takes an effect on his opponent.

Two "wazari" (half points) equal an ippon. A wazari is awarded if a throwing technique is half effective or a contestant holds his opponent on the mat for 25 seconds.

Tickets for the tourney are set at 50 cents for adults, 35 cents for students and 15 cents for children.

Squad-Cutting Problem Tough For Braves

Four Milwaukee Pitchers Have Perfect ERAs

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Milwaukee Manager Bobby Bragan has a problem — one any major league baseball team boss would like to have.

Bragan's problem is how to cut his squad of 37 players to 25 when he has so many youngsters who look like they can make the grade with the National League team this year.

"We have a real tough cutting down problem all the way," Bragan said Saturday after rain washed out the Cincinnati-Milwaukee exhibition game.

"We have difficult decisions to make in every department. Our rookies have shown a surprising amount of maturity, and some of the more experienced fellows like Ozzie Virgil and Ernie Bowman have also been impressive. Cutting the squad is going to take a lot of discussion and thought."

Has 10-2 Record
The Braves pitching, both by veterans and rookies, has been excellent in the Grapefruit League in which Milwaukee has a 10-2 record. Brave hurlers have compiled an earned run average of 2.72 in 110 innings and have yielded only 89 hits and 47 runs. They have struck out 64 batters and walked 41.

Four Milwaukee pitchers have perfect earned run averages. They are Bob Tiefenauer in eight innings, rookie Denny Ribant in five, Dan Schneider in four and Ron Piche in one. Three others have given up only one earned run each — Denny Lemaster and Bob Sadowski in 12 innings each for 0.75 averages and rookie Phil Niekro in five innings for 1.80.

Bragan plans to keep about nine or 10 hurlers. There are 14 men bidding for the jobs.

Golfer Frank Beard's Condition Improved
LOUISVILLE (AP) — Professional golfer Frank Beard's condition was described Saturday as greatly improved.

His physician said Beard was out of a coma and his condition was good.

'Not Restricting the Field' MU Cage Job Wide Open, Says Abbott

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dr. UCLA's national champions) is Thomas R. Abbott, chairman of just plain ridiculous.

Marquette University's Athletic Board, said Saturday that the do so until it meets, probably early next week.

Hickey's official work as coach and athletic director will end March 31 but he will remain at the school until September to assist the board and the school in its planning for the 1964-65 season.

Clark Reported an Applicant for MU Job
A reliable Marquette University source reported Saturday that Gene (Torchy) Clark, Appleton Xavier High School coach, is one of the applicants for the Warrior basketball coaching job. Ed Hickey was dropped as MU's head coach several days ago.

coach to succeed Eddie Hickey, who was fired earlier this week after six years at the school.

"We are not restricting the field," Abbott said. "We want the best man we can get, and if that's a big name coach, fine. But that does not mean we don't want a small college coach, or a high school coach, or a pro coach for that matter."

"We will take the best man we can get, all things considered. To say that we don't want to hear from a man unless his name is John Wooden (coach of

Ron Perranoski, Moeller Star in Intrastate Tilt

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ron Perranoski and Joe Moeller each pitched four scoreless innings Saturday as the Pete Reisers and the Leo Durochers played a 1-1 tie in a Los Angeles Dodger intra-squad game.

The contest was rained out after eight innings.

The game was arranged after the Dodgers were rained out of a scheduled exhibition against Kansas City at Bradenton, Fla.

Perranoski and Moeller each allowed two hits. A single by John Werhas and a double by Doug Camilli gave the Reisers their run.

Willie Davis scored for the Durochers after reaching base on an error. He went all the way to third on an infield hit and scored on Lee Walls' sacrifice fly.

76ers Square Playoff Series

Dierking Hits 16 In Second Half Against Royals

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Substitute Connie Dierking scored 16 points in the second half as he led the Philadelphia 76ers to a 129-120 victory over the Cincinnati Royals Saturday night, deadlocking the National Basketball Association Eastern Division semifinal playoffs at two games apiece.

The teams met tonight in Cincinnati in the deciding game to determine which will face the Boston Celtics in the Eastern final series which starts Tuesday in Boston.

Philadelphia took the lead 73-73 on a basket by Hal Greer with 6:52 remaining in the third period and held on the rest of the way as Dierking, a late replacement for John Kerr, scored seven field goals and two free throws.

The closest Cincinnati came after that was three points and the 76ers led by as many as 12. The Royals, led by Oscar Robertson, who scored 31 points and Tom Hawkins with 25, cut the 76ers margin to five points at 119-114, but Paul Neumann and Chet Walker hit successive baskets to put the game away for Philadelphia.

Greer, with 24 points, was the top scorer for the 76ers, who also got some fourth quarter help from Lee Shaffer. Shaffer, out most of the season with a severe knee injury, popped in four field goals late in the final period.

Cincinnati, was handicapped because of an injury to its top rebounder, Jerry Lucas. Lucas, the NBA Rookie of the Year, scored 14 points and managed only nine rebounds. He went scoreless in the second half before finally fouling out.

Philadelphia outrebounded the taller Royals 68-59.

7 Lettermen Report for Drills; Intrasquad Meet Set by Coach

OSHKOSH—Less spectacular probably would be held indoors performances but more overall this week to get a better line on depth is the early forecast for some of the newcomers. He said the Oshkosh High School team there were a number of promising sophomores in the sprints, are currently shufling out the and there may be more depth return of winter with indoor in the hurdles although no one practice sessions appears to be as strong as Stein-

Gone from last year's team are three performers who accounted for most of Oshkosh's points in every meet—Bill Steinhilber, pole vault, high jump and hurdles, Bob "Gus" Oaks, pole vault, and John Beibell, weights.

Back, however, are seven lettermen and around this group Flood believes he can build a better balanced team with more overall strength. About 60 candidates are working out daily.

Returnees are Dean Becker in the 440, Wayland McAllister, hurdles; Gerry Splittgerber, sprints and broad jump; Gary Wood, 886; Lee Kantin, relays, and a pair of juniors, Bruce Ebel and Rick Fuhs in the weights.

NOTES and NOTIONS

The name of the game is defense. What game? Almost any one in this particular athletic era. Last weekend, Dodgeville and UCLA rode to championships on the wings of superb defensive play — just as such other teams as Marinette Central Catholic, the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Dodgers had done in recent months Dodgeville became one of the rare perfect record Wisconsin public school basketball tournament champions by muzzling Milwaukee North's runaway offense. UCLA, in rounding out its undefeated season, (excluding Olympic trials) put the clamps on a number of high-powered teams to win the national collegiate title. Defense and ball control were the trademark of the Marinette quintet that won the Wisconsin Catholic prep crown. Chicago's Bears were outstripped by many of their NFL adversaries in total-season offensive accomplishments but their hard-to-pierce defense enabled them to edge the Packers for divisional honors and the Giants for the grand championship. The Dodgers, from the standpoint of run production, had practically a powder-puff attack in '63, yet won the National League pennant with brilliant pitching and staunch defense. And, there's no need to recount what Dodger pitching (which is the No. 1 item in defense) did to the powerhouse Yanks in the World Series.

Neither Dodgeville nor Marinette was as spectacular as such recent state champions as the 1963 Appleton Xavier team, the '63 Manitowoc team or Milwaukee Lincoln's recent titlists. But the "Weenie" Wilson-coached Dodgers and the Marty Crowe-coached Cavaliers got the job done with deliberate, disciplined basketball and almost invariably got the opposition to play their type of game. As a number of former players have pointed out to us, this appears to be a throwback to the basketball of 30 years ago. Pattern basketball appears to be well on its way back — especially at the high school level. This, of course, is ironical, since Wisconsin's Bud Foster was generally criticized a few years ago for being behind the times with his pattern game — and this sentiment played a big part in his resignation. Low-scoring games became quite commonplace during the last half of the 1963-4 season — particularly at tournament time.

We may see more teams next season deserting the fast-breaking offense in favor of the ball-control, defense-oriented type of game. What does it take to make this style of ball go? You've got to have solid performers at every position — erratic players won't do — and they've got to be heady boys and sharp passers (the opposition can't score without the ball). The needed type of player also doesn't panic if things go against them for a while. They've got to work for the good shots and take only the favorable-percentage shots. And, above all, they've got to be expert defensive players who are able to make a lead of a comparatively few baskets stand up.

Among other prep teams who took extraordinary pride in their defenses and developed them into some of the state's best are Appleton Xavier, Appleton High and Menasha. The Clem Massey-coached Bluejays produced a career renaissance at Menasha with a poised set-play offense and a masterful defense. They produced the school's first M-E title in 10 years (co-crown with Kimberly), a regional title and the best record since the '53 state championship days. In forging the best AHS record in at least 11 years, the Dick Emanuel-directed Terrors exhibited a consistently-powerful defense. AHS finished three games ahead of the Manitowoc team which smashed the FRVC scoring record. The key to Xavier's 22-1 record (surpassed only by Dodgeville's 26-0 among the state's nearly 500 prep cage teams) was defense. Coach Gene (Torchy) Clark went from his famed press to the zone, and the Hawks limited their foes to about 45 points per game — a brilliant defensive average.

Among other coaches who earned the plaudits of Fox Cities fans this season were Fox Valley Lutheran's Gerry Kaniess and Kimberly's Gene Mason. In directing the Foxes to their third straight conference title (and to the runnerup spot in the state Lutheran invitational meet) Kaniess joined Emanuel and Clark to make Appleton the only 3-title town in the state. Mason made his inaugural season at Kimberly a rousing success with the co-M-E title and the DePere regional crown.

The ouster of Marquette Coach and Athletic Director Ed Hickey was one of few major coaching changes that wasn't "telegraphed" by a flock of rumors. It's true the Warriors had a miserable season (5-21), yet because of Hickey's illustrious career record, his dismissal was in the nature of a surprise. Actually, there must be more to this action than meets the eye. Marquette has not had a "win or else" philosophy for its coaches. Jack Nagle posted a 10-15 record in '57, but was not fired. The revered Bill Chandler, suffered through such season records as 7-12, 2-13, 6-11 and 6-17 without being dropped. Hickey, on the other hand, had directed the Warriors to five straight winning seasons (including three appearances in NCAA or NIT post-season classics) before running into this single losing campaign. Seemingly, then, there must be some other factor in this dismissal — such as a clash with administration over policy or Hickey's handling of players. Though Hickey has always been accepted as a strict disciplinarian, the school may have felt that in the dropping of four cagers this season (for a New Year's Eve curfew violation) and perhaps other less-publicized incidents Hickey went too far. It's possible the MU administration felt recruiting will be tougher this year if MU's image under Hickey has become unfavorable. With the abandonment of football, MU shot the works in basketball. The administration evidently feels that only under a new coach can the school's reputation as a strong basketball school be regained.

Rumor Has Frank Thomas Going to Phils

Story Declares Mets Would Get 5 Players for 2

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — The trade rumors are flying around the training camp of the Philadelphia Phillies these days as the club looks for a right-handed hitting outfielder and a left-handed relief pitcher. The story circulating now is a five-for-two deal with the New York Mets that would send pitchers John Bozzer, Dallas Green and Paul Brown and infielders Don Hoak and John Herstein to New York or outfielder Frank Thomas and pitcher Al Jackson.

General Manager John Quinn of the Phillies also is interested in Gene Freese, Pittsburgh third baseman-outfielder. Mets Reluctant There is a chance the Phils might be willing to throw in infielder Ruben Amaro if the Mets are interested. Quinn says negotiation is stymied by the reluctance of the Mets "to tell us what they want."

All I know is that they need pit and infielders of which we have a surplus," Quinn says. He adds the "burgh is holding off a while before talking about Freese.

Amateur—Like the Chicago Bears

First Olympic Athletes Lived Like Gods, Spent Full Year in Training

OLYMPIA, Greece (AP) — This is going to come as a shock to a certain set of people, but the fellows who ran in the ancient Olympic Games were about as amateur as the Chicago Bears.

The winners, anyway. And nobody cared who came in second. The athletes were as finely trained as a modern boxer, and they traveled with the same sort of entourage as Cassius Clay, complete with trainers, rub-down men and cheer leaders.

They trained and competed all year around. And they never worked at all.

Of course, work was never the strong point of the ancient Greeks, who preferred to have slaves do it.

Plato, who attended the games here at the age of 70 and was a rabid sports fan, once listed nine occupations of man. He put work seventh, just ahead of rabble rousers and dictators.

A winner at the Olympics was could travel from one to the one of the biggest men in next, year in and year out, pick Greece. Part of the reason was religious.

The Games, which were staged for 1,163 years in this once-splendid sanctuary of the god Zeus, were religious festivals from 164 to 152 B. C.

The Greeks — who invented logic but were as superstitious as everybody else in the old world — believed the winners at the Games had been selected by the gods.

They put up statues to the victors, wrote poems about them and showered them with gold. Their bills were paid for the rest of their lives.

Home cities sometimes knocked a hole in the wall for a triumphal entrance after the Games, as if to show that a city with sons who could win at the Olympics didn't need walls for protection.

Of course, the city fathers carefully filled the holes up again, since Greek cities were always squabbling and the truce declared for the Olympics ran out after the athletes got home.

AP Picks Buford, Allen for Rookie Honors in 1964

Oliva, Hart, Jesus Alou are Other Highly-Rated Freshmen

BY JOE REICHLER
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A pair of infielders, Don Buford of the Chicago White Sox and Richie Allen of the Philadelphia Phillies, are the Associated Press picks to capture 1964 Rookie of the Year awards in the major leagues.

The switch-hitting Buford, a third baseman at Indianapolis last year, has been nominated by Manager Al Lopez to fill the shoes of the departed Nellie Fox at second base.

Allen, who played left field at Little Rock in 1963, has been ticketed by Manager Gene Mauch to succeed Don Hoak as the Phillies' third baseman.

Buford could be the second successive White Sox player to win the American League Rookie of the Year award. Southpaw Gary Peters won it last year. Pete Rosen of the Cincinnati Reds was named National League Rookie of the Year.

Buford is a bit old as rookies. He's played only four years of minor league ball, the same as the 22-year-old Allen. Buford, a former University of Southern California star, led the International League in five categories last year and was named the league's Most Valuable Player.

Allen, a big leaguer in every respect, says Lopez. "He has shown me enough to cause me to shed any fears I might have had about him."

Allen, bigger and stronger, has the potential to develop into one of the National League's top sluggers. The broad-shouldered, slim-waisted native of Wampum, Pa., led the International League in home runs with 33 and runs batted in with 97 last year.

There has been some scepticism about Allen's ability to make the switch from the outfield to third base but Mauch is convinced the right-handed hitting youngster can do it.

Watch Out! Allen's chief competition for NL rookie honors should come from the San Francisco Giants' pair of third basemen Jimmy Stewart and Willie Mays.

Other Braves rookies with a chance to stick include shortstop Santos Alomar and pitchers Phil Niekro and Dennis Ribant.

John Paciorek, a 19-year-old outfielder, appears to have won a berth on the Houston Astros. The Detroit bonus kid has demonstrated good right-handed power.

Johnny Lewis and Doug Clemens, a pair of outfielders, and Bobby Knopp probably has the inside track for the Los Angeles Angels' regular second base job.

New York Yankee camp is Pedro Gonzalez, the 25-year-old second baseman, who has had three previous trials.

The only rookie likely to stick with the Washington Senators is Tony Brumley, a 25-year-old catcher. Cleveland's best bet is Tommy John, a 21-year-old left-hander.

Seeks Lumpe's Post Dick Green, who will try to replace the departed Jerry Lumpe at second base, is the only rookie sure of sticking with the Kansas City Athletics. Tommy Reynolds, a 22-year-old outfielder, has looked good but he probably will be sent out for more experience.

Cubs Purchase Amalfitano for Waiver Price

Chicago Now Has Four Trying to Fill Hubbs' Spot

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, seeking a successor to the late Ken Hubbs at second base, bought 30-year-old Joe Amalfitano from Tacoma, Wash., of the Pacific Coast League Saturday.

The Cubs reportedly paid the major league waiver price of $20,000 for the right-handed hitting and throwing infielder. He is a six-year National League veteran with the San Francisco Giants and Houston Colts.

Amalfitano has been working out with the Los Angeles Angels during spring training. He will report to the Cubs for their game with the Boston Red Sox Monday at Scottsdale, Ariz.

Last year Amalfitano, who originally signed a bonus contract with the Giants in 1954, batted .175 in 14 games for the Giants and .233 in 34 for Tacoma.

His addition gives the Cubs four candidates for the job vacated when Hubbs was killed in the crash of his small plane near Provo, Utah, Feb. 15. The others are veterans Leo Burke and Ken Aspromonte and rookie Jimmy Stewart.

Rookies Face Tough Road on Pro Golf Tour

Floyd, Beard Only Successful Rookies On '63 Tourney Trail

BY HUGH FULLERTON JR.

NEW YORK (AP) — About a year ago Raymond Floyd, a real unknown on the pro golf circuit, won the St. Petersburg Open from a field of vastly more experienced players.

It was a sensation because the 20-year-old Floyd hadn't won a dime in 10 previous tournaments on the winter tour and had only played the full 72 holes once.

This year Bruce Devlin of Australia won the same tournament—his first victory in America. Devlin wasn't exactly unknown because he is a former Australian champion and had played on the U. S. tour before.

This combination of events, plus the fact that no player has won two tournaments so far on the winter tour, which winds up April 12 with the Masters, gives an idea of the uncertainties of American pro golf competition. It's the world's toughest and is getting tougher every year for newcomers.

What Chance

What chance does a rookie on the pro tour have of walking to the payoff window ahead of the likes of Arnie Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Tony Lema? Not much, though some one breaks through nearly every year.

Lema, now a big money winner, had three lean, frustrating years on the pro tour before he ment. Finally won a tournament of importance late in 1962. When Julius Rosenberg, Don Massengale, Jus Boros, the current U. S. Open champion, turned pro, his Jerry Steelsmith are regarded only victory in two years was as successful pros, but they re-quired three years or more of a Ben Hogan, starting out to-earnest effort before they could day as Hogan did in 1932 and win. Some haven't made it yet.

1933, couldn't get an Approved Tournament Player's card and probably would go broke even faster than Ben did. It wasn't until 1940 that Hogan broke into the big time winners' circle. Earlier he had to leave the tour twice because he ran out of money.

Nicklaus Exception

Of course, Jack Nicklaus won the U. S. Open in his first year as a pro, the Masters and the PGA in his second and a mint of money both years. He's the great exception. Nicklaus was beating pros when he was 16. Palmer won the Canadian Open in 1955, his freshman year as a pro, and finished in the top 10 eight other times. He was tabbed as a future great on that showing. The same year Gene Littler and Billy Maxwell, who won two tournaments in 1954, won the winter tour, which winds up April 12 with the Masters, gives an idea of the uncertainties of American pro golf competition. The next year Mason Rudolph finished in the money in his first 11 PGA tournaments then won the 14th. Phil Rodgers and Jack Cupit, 1961 rookies, were big the pro tour have of walking to winners that year but they were the payoff window ahead of the overshadowed by Nicklaus.

Success String Amazes Celtics' Red Auerbach

Russell, Pride Cited as Prime Ingredients of Unit

BY BOB HOOBING Associated Press Staff Writer

BOSTON (AP) — "It's amazing how long we've stayed on top. Even I never expected it."

This is the startling statement by Red Auerbach, whose Boston Celtics are entering the playoffs in quest of their sixth straight National Basketball Association title and seventh in eight years.

But don't confuse the coach's long-range surprise with a mistaken notion the aging Celtics themselves feel the end of the trail is in sight.

The champs are ready for playoff battle. The old soldiers of the sneaker set officially declare war at Boston Garden Tuesday night when they open the Eastern Division finals.

Opposing players may have tossed Boston its best ammunition when two-time Most Valuable Player Bill Russell was voted third this season behind Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson and San Francisco's Wilt Chamberlain.

Russell plus pride make the Celtics go.

Publicly the big Celtics' center says he's happy with the election returns, but privately he's fuming. And there's nothing more dangerous than a wounded tiger. Russell is ready to devour the playoff foe.

And so are the other Celts.

"I didn't have to get this team up for the playoffs," says Auerbach. "They've been getting themselves up."

"These fellows are great players and they like being champions."

Auerbach admits the latest divisional crown has been the toughest and left him with the greatest sense of accomplishment.

Bob Cousy's retirement took the zing out of Boston's fast break. The team, average age 30, then met and conquered the season's challenge of a much younger Cincinnati club.

"I think it was about my best coaching job," Auerbach says. "We were able to make a complete reversal of style from being the best offensive team in the game to the best defensive team."

"It is fundamental that the thing to do is fit the system to the players. It's something most coaches talk about yet few accomplish. It isn't easy."

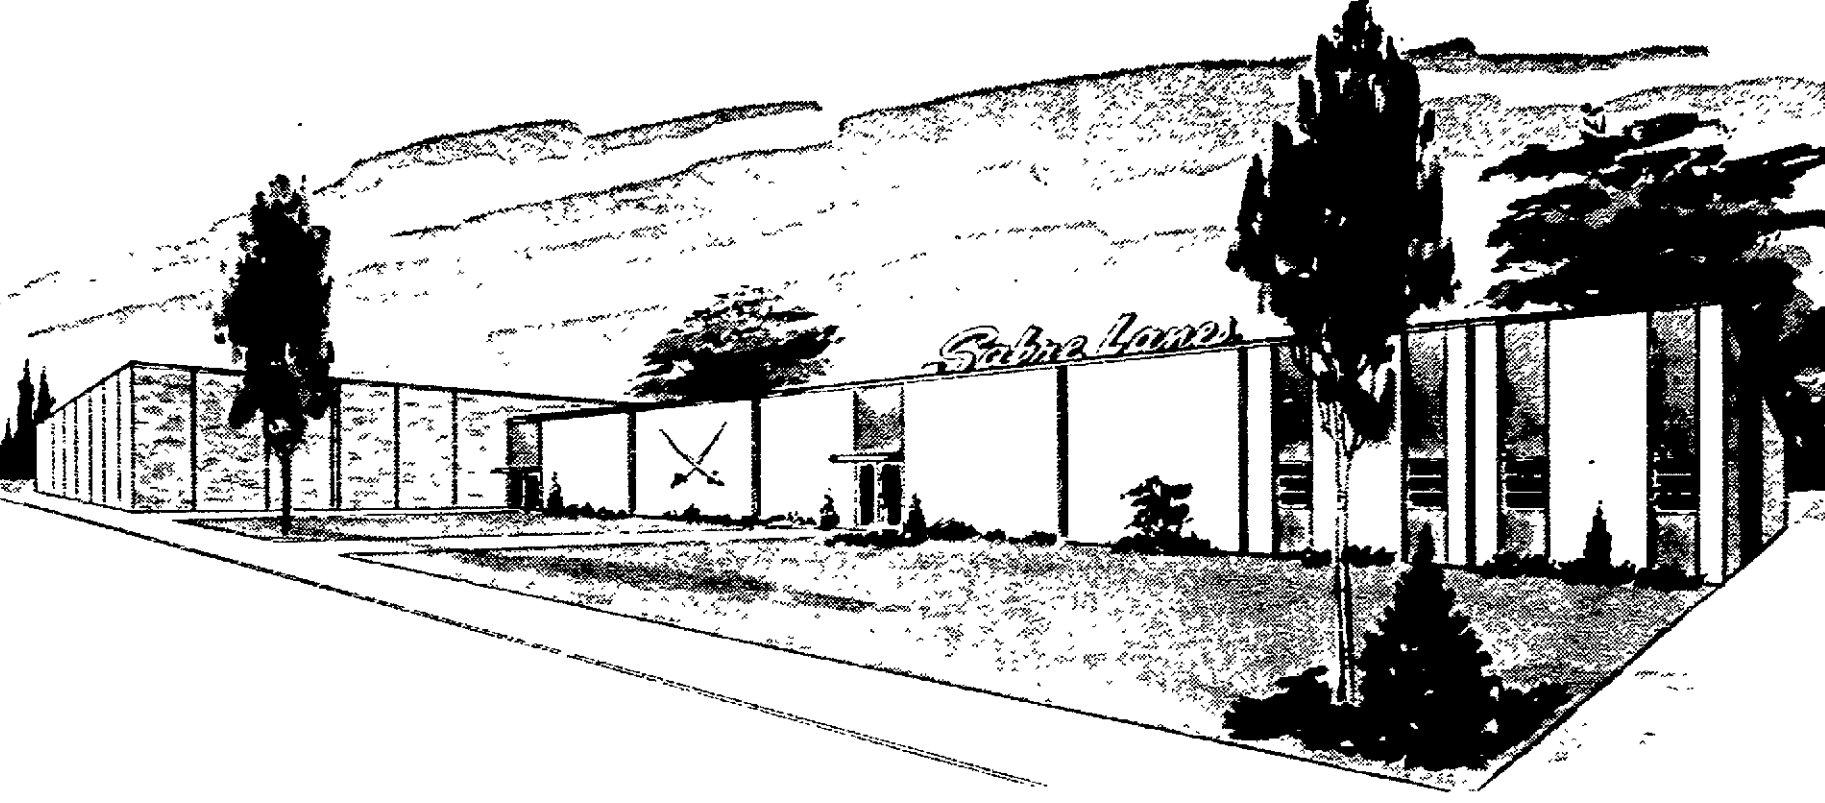

"These problems were tough enough."

"What made it really difficult were the ones which popped up along the way."

"We couldn't sign our top draft choice, Bill Green, because he refused to fly. I got hit with a $500 fine before the season started. Frank Ramsey and Russell signed controversial articles. Heinsohn got caught in the middle of a pension argument with our owner, Walter Brown."

"And we had an abnormal amount of injuries."

Black Hawks, Red Wings Clash Tonight

CHICAGO (AP) — Both the Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings had light workouts on Chicago Stadium ice Saturday.

Coaches Billy Reay of the Hawks and Sid Abel of the Wings said their teams were mentally and physically set for the second game of the National Hockey League Stanley Cup playoff semifinals here tonight.

Detroit defenseman Al Langlois will be able to play with a protective mask over his broken right cheekbone. He suffered the injury in the opening minutes of the first game Thursday when the Hawks' Bill Hay checked him into the boards.

Three-Goal Burst

The Hawks won the opener 4-1 with a three-goal burst in the last period.

Reay said three youngsters will be brought up from Buffalo as standbys, joining the Hawks in Detroit Tuesday. They are defenseman Ed Van Impe and forwards Doug Robinson and Dale McDonald. Their American League season ends Sunday.

Reay said that the Red Wings will continue to see a lot of Bobby Hull. Serving nearly 10 minutes as a penalty-killer, Hull played 35 minutes of the regulation 60 Thursday.

"He is ready for similar extra duty Sunday," said Reay. "He loves it. He thrives on work. Bobby's ice time had to tail off during the season, but he's had two days now to get ready for this game."

Hull had to settle for two assists Thursday but he controlled the puck much of the night, making plays, checking, and keeping Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk under pressure with his cannon shots.

SINGAPORE (AP) — A car thundered off the track at 110 miles an hour during qualifying trials Saturday and killed a flag marshal. The driver was seriously injured.

Soh Buk Khoo, 28, the marshal, was struck as he stood along the straightaway with an all-clear flag in his hand. Ian Barnwell, driving an Aston Martin in preparation for Sunday's Malaysian sports car grand prix, was thrown out of his car and taken to the hospital with serious injuries.

SINGLE SHOT

by Jim Harp

The voice on the other end of the line was faint and there was a humming sound which was interrupted frequently by clicking.

Then the voice of the operator came through above the noise and I could hear her inquire: "Is this Driftwood Lodge?" The reply was in the affirmative and in a few seconds Lin Winkelman, operator of the resort deep in the heart of eastern Ontario was offering a cheery hello.

In the short space of the conversation arrangements were completed for a visit to Driftwood Lodge and several outpost camps early in June. Winkelman promised some top notch fishing for brook trout, lake trout and a chance at some northern and walleyes in between.

Throughout the telephone visit it was nearly impossible to believe that it was still March. The talk about fishing, plans for the trip, things to bring along, the airplane flight — all these had a hand in transporting this writer into another world for a brief moment. In those fleeting seconds it was possible to picture a gleaming blue lake, the outpost camp that we'll call home during our stay and the green of the pine trees jutting into a background of a morning sky.

We will be driving to Sault Ste. Marie early in June and from there it will be an airplane hop either to the main lodge at Ranger Lake or to one of the outposts.

Ranger Lake is about 80 miles from the Soo and most of the lakes we are fishing will be about 15 to 30 minutes flying time from there.

While preparations are underway in the next two months we'll be telling you more about it. For now, it's a matter of looking out the window and not seeing what's there — we find ourselves day-dreaming more and more.

Tickets are now on sale for the annual Outagamie Conservation Club's Fisherman's Party which will be held April 11 at Appleton High School.

Business places throughout the county as well as club members have tickets.

Tips, slips and gags, from the weekly mail bag:

A tabulation by the conservation department shows that Wisconsin has 336 kinds of birds, 174 kinds of fish, 78 different mammals, 40 reptiles and 23 amphibians.

It takes 13 years to grow a 40-inch legal sturgeon in Lake Poygan.

The beaver can cut down a willow tree five inches thick in three minutes.

That will be enough for today. Too much of that stuff on top of all those Easter eggs this morning may tend to spoil the whole day.

TIPS FROM THE TACKLE BOX

by B. F. GLASSING

Tricks That Call Fish

IN THE DEEP SOUTH fishermen have a trick for attracting pan fish which they call "Panning the Lettuce." It goes like this.

First, anchor your boat in the center of a large patch of lily pads. Next, pick up an ear of poddy and while the beeboppers out of all the lily pads within reach. Wait a few moments, then lower your bait—a worm, grub or what have you—through an opening among the pads. If all goes well, business should be brisk.

The reason is simple. By waiting the pads you dislodge a variety of insect life from the underside of the leaves, thereby causing a sudden shower of slowly sinking manna which promptly attracts hungry fish from all directions. The trick can be pulled wherever there are pad patches but, where none exist, variations of the same stunt can be used to create the same result.

One such substitute move is to take along a box of rice and scatter small handfuls around the boat from time to time. Any passing school of perch, bluegills or other pan fish will turn aside to inspect this easily spotted shower of interesting particles, and then you're in business. Scatter more rice between bites to keep the school excited and on location.

Another come-on consists of mistletoeing uncooked oatmeal, molding it into balls and dropping these over the side. The oatmeal will attract any minnows in the vicinity and the concentration of bait fish will soon call larger fish—pan fish, and same fish as well.

This leads to another caper: Take along a screen mesh minnow trap and when in position, transfer the bulk of your minnows to the trap, leaving only enough in the minnow bucket for immediate needs. Lower the trap to the bottom and dangle a minnow baited hook nearby. The trap full of fishing minnows will pull hungry fish and they won't waste time grabbing your bait.

Finally, here's a stunt so simple that it's usually overlooked: Simply hold your tin in hand and lower it straight down from the gunwale. On hot, bright days fish often move directly under a boat for shade. They may refuse to move out into the sunlight for your bait but they'll usually gobble it if you drop it in front of their noses.

Anglers Braving Elements Taking Some Fish on Wolf

Should Water Stay Low, Walleyes to be Concentrated In Mid-Channel of River

BY DAVE OTTO

The Wolf River is open! With this electrifying piece of information rapidly making the rounds of the angling fraternity, 10 days ago a depth gauge was one of the sporting world's great detective stories is off to its earliest start in many a year.

A check of the famed walleye spawning haven last week revealed chills, but still open water from New London all the way downstream through Winnebago. For the truly dedicated walleye fishermen open water means head for the river and the chill winds be damned. The open water also means it is time for fishery biologists, fishermen, resort operators, old natives, bartenders and the kid on duty at the one-pump gas station to try and make rhyme or reason of the fickle movements of the bronze-flanked visitor from Lake Winnebago.

To complicate the whole guessing game, the water level in the river are all but disappearing in spots. At ice-out rounds of the angling fraternity, 10 days ago a depth gauge was set up at Gil's Landing east of Weyauwega, and it already has registered a nine-inch drop.

George Guth, dispenser of boats, liquor and bits of angling wisdom at Guth's Landing for 52 years, claims the Wolf is as low as he has ever seen it.

While all the experts are trying to tie the loose ends of the puzzle together, one fact remained obvious last week. Those anglers hardy enough to brave the elements were taking fish.

Some of the fishing reports from favorite spots up and down the river included:

Winnebago Bridge — Spotty catches, mostly at night, with some large walleyes included in the bag. First warm rain should bring some fast action. Fishing pressure quite heavy.

Fremont — Water open both sides of bridge with little fishing pressure. Several limit catches made over last weekend.

Gill's Landing — Water all open and very low. Half a dozen boats working this area each day, with nine pike between two anglers the best reported catch. Most fishing during daylight hours.

Guth's Landing — Fishing pressure light, but those anglers working getting some results. Low water has concentrated fish in main channel. Landing operator George Guth predicts hot fishing with heavy run in reduced channel.

Northport — Two days of limit catches reported in bend below Northport bridge before school moved on. Boat livery operator reports turning down 20 requests for boats this weekend because ice has prevented putting in launching docks.

New London — From here on up-river is still solid ice. Boat landing below town open with several nice catches reported, including a seven pound spawner walleye. Mixed feeling on whether these are local fish or the vanguard of the run from Winnebago and Poygan.

Fantastic Hatch

But no matter how many pike make their way up river—and with the fantastic 1959 hatch reaching spawning size it could be a considerable number—the biggest problem will be finding some place for them to spawn.

The Shiocton area marshes, which traditionally provide the cradles for the tiny walleye fry, are mostly high and dry. Snoehr's marsh, which normally hosts several thousand spawning pike each spring, underwent extensive improvement by the Wisconsin Conservation Department last year but without water the work will go for naught.

Conservation Department biologists from Oshkosh have been trying to locate the pike with test nets and shocker rigs, but without much success.

25,000 Boat Registrations Due by Tuesday

Numbers Will be Cancelled if Not Renewed With State

MADISON—An estimated 25,000 Wisconsin boat license numbers are scheduled for cancellation on March 31 unless renewal notices are received by that date, according to Reuben Redeman, supervisor in charge of registration for the Conservation Department.

The date marks the end of a one-year grace period. Boats were due for re-registration on March 31, 1963. Persons who still own the same boat may retain the original number by signing up before the deadline. Otherwise numbers will be cancelled and assigned to other boats.

New numbers will be issued after March 31.

Redeman urged persons who own boats not yet re-licensed to sign up before the deadline in order to avoid expense and trouble connected with attaching new numbers to their craft.

He said about 15,000 numbers were cancelled during the past year after the department had been informed of a boat's destruction, sale or other disposal. No word has yet been received on the remaining 25,000 set for cancellation on March 31.

Fee for re-registration is $3 if ownership has not changed and $4 if it has. Current licenses expire in 1966.

About 220,000 boats are registered in the state.

ated by a $44.35 license and tag supply printing order approved by the agency for this year. The supplies include 35 separate hunting, fishing and trapping licenses and tags.

Trade Potential High In Recreational Areas

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The trade development potential of state parks and other outdoor recreational attractions in Wisconsin is attracting more notice among state government policy makers as the state accelerates its recreational land buying and development.

Current studies have shown that the economic returns to the community of a major recreational development are tangible and substantial, and often measure up in the economic gains of the establishment of a new industry.

John Beale, state forestry chief, has informed a legislative committee that the neighborhood which has reported on the economic impact of the thousands of hunters, nature lovers and equivalent of $5,000,000 yearly watchers and others who are according to a study sponsored by a Baraboo banking company. State Calls for Bids On Proposed Work in Collins Marsh Project

MADISON—A few man-made waterfowl and pheasant preserve within easy reach of sportsmen of the populous eastern Wisconsin counties will come into being late this year.

The state conservation department has called for bids on the construction of a dam and dikes for the impoundment of water on the Collins public hunting grounds area in eastern Manitowish county.

The contracts will probably be let before mid-summer, with work to be completed before fall when the first additional flooding of the marsh area will be made possible, says the state game division.

The county is building new service roads in the 4,400-acre area this spring and some of the old roads will be adapted for diking, officials said.

The project has been regarded by eastern Wisconsin Sportsmen as one of the major outdoor recreational developments in the district and has been ardently supported by local conservation club interests.

Revolution in Trout Feeding Continues

MADISON — The revolution in trout feeding techniques at the state fish hatcheries continues.

The use of dry feeds in the form of carefully composed pellets which include proteins, minerals, vitamins and other needed ingredients is now being extended to the tiny fry, freshly hatched and searching for his first bite of food, according to the state fisheries division.

Campers Demand For Sites Above Those Available

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The conservation commission has adopted what is in effect a policy on the question of providing camping sites for visitors to state parks and forests.

As elaborated in a conservation department bulletin, the commission has concluded that the state has a responsibility to supply a good number of such sites at reasonable rates but that it cannot meet the entire demand for such facilities nor provide them at "unrealistically" low rates.

Both private enterprise and other units of government should be encouraged to help meet increasing demand, the department explained.

Warden at Amery Cited for Work

MADISON — Conservation Department Law Enforcement Officer Robert J. Ward, 44, Amery, has been named outstanding warden of 1963.

Cited for "faithful, able service," Ward has honored at a hometown dinner attended by top conservation department officials, legislators and local citizens.

Panfish Outnumber Larger Game Fish By 100 to One Ratio

MADISON—In typical Wisconsin waters the ratio of abundance of panfish to larger game fish is probably 100 to one in favor of the panfish, according to a seasonal capacity at Phillips Woodruff, Osceola, Appleton, Towns and Lakewood.

The estimate of C. W. Thremington, his appointment as an on-netting surveys of Wisconsin waters was given in explanation of the conservation department's policy of permitting the harvest of panfish without size or bag limits.

Swiss Ski Spa Recovers From Typhoid Scare

Zermatt Rebuilt
Old Sewers to Recapture Trade

BY GEOFFREY
ZERMATT, Switzerland (AP)
—Last year, at this time, Zermatt was a ghost village. They had all fled. All of them Swiss, British, American.

No longer were there the good natured shouts of energetic skiers, no longer the exquisitely dressed men-skiers, no longer the crowded after-ski dances. All fled as the cry arose 'Typhoid'.

The first case was discovered March 19. Within the week it reached epidemic proportions. By March 25, not a tourist remained, all hotels and pensions were shut down.

Bounced Back
Zermatt grimly concluded things would never be the same again in the world famous resort at the foot of the Matterhorn.

But the current season is beyond all expectation. To get a place on the ski trails you have to first arrange a place in the trains and cable cars running to the slopes. The competition is tough, there are 6,000 others with the same idea. The main reason seems to be that people forget disasters very easily.

Criticism
Last year there was criticism that officials in Zermatt thought more about protecting the village name and holding onto tourists than it did about taking quick precautionary moves.

There were allegations of attempted cover-ups. It also was said the Swiss should have immediately evacuated all tourists as soon as the typhoid cases were discovered.

From the few cases, the typhoid blossomed full scale. By the time it had run its course more than 150 Swiss and foreign tourists fell ill — and two local women and a tourist from Britain died.

Action Taken
The village emptied March 31. The Swiss government moved into action.

Experts took the drainage system apart and even used television cameras to search for leaks. They found many. The antiquated system had not been built to stand the strain of the tremendous tourist boom which hit Zermatt when it first became a recognized winter resort after World War II.

The work began to put things right. A new sewage works complete with filters was built at a cost of $1,158,000. A new brick incinerator now burns all the garbage. Zermatters are quick to point out that this project was started before the typhoid outbreak.

Declared Safe
On June 1 the Swiss government declared Zermatt safe for tourists.

Vacuum cleaners, imported from Canada buzzed through the narrow streets picking up the dirt. The villagers swept, polished and scrubbed their shops, chalets and hotels until they shone with cleanliness. Then, tense and apprehensive, they waited for the summer season.

Zermatters have an especially soft spot for the Americans because they were the first to come back in any numbers.

Drift Back
Gradually the old faithfuls, particularly the British and the Germans, began to drift back.

By August the hotels and pensions were 56 per cent occupied as the summer climbers and hikers arrived. The hotels were 80 per cent occupied during the same month in 1962, but the number of tourists flocking back to Zermatt was still more than even the most optimistic villager had dared hope.

At Christmas, despite the lack of snow which affected most European ski resorts, Zermatt hotels reported a 10 per cent increase in bookings over the previous year.

Norman Blohm Youngsters Have Menagerie of Animals to Love

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

The plaintive 'baaa' of a baby lamb—the first fledgling flight of a pigeon—the shut-eyed squirm of a new-born puppy—the softness of a new chick—and the calm friendliness of a Shetland pony are the springtime concerns of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Blohm.

Three years ago the family moved from Seymour to five acres of 'child heaven', on Lawn Road, a town line road between Seymour and Cicero townships. There they love and take care of a heifer, the pony, sheep, pigs, ducks, geese, pigeons, chickens, rabbits, a couple of dogs and a few cats.

It was the youngsters' desire for a horse that helped prompt the family move. On the few acres of land Mr. Blohm, an Outagamie County employee, raises corn or hay to help feed the animals.

Before the move, the family kept only a few rabbits. Now every child, except 22-month-old Norman Jr., has his own responsibility. They love it.

Kathleen, 11, takes care of the horse, heifer and sheep. Barbara, 9, has charge of the rabbits. Julie, 6, collects eggs and feeds the pigeons.

Special favorites of all are the orphaned lambs they are raising. At first the bottle-

Every child longs for a pet of his own, and the four children of Norman and Violet Blohm have more than enough to go around. There are dogs to wrestle, lambs to cuddle, a pony to ride, and baby bunnies to watch. The family moved to its home and five-acre plot of land three years ago from Seymour and wouldn't consider going back to the city again. Above, Barbara, nine, holds baby rabbits no bigger than her hands. At left, Kathleen, 11, feeds one of the two orphan lambs the youngsters are raising. Julie, six, below left, knows the proper way of caring for a goose. All the youngsters, except Norman Jr., shown below with his parents, have their own chores and special tasks. When they're finished, it's time for fun.

Perennial Disease Aims at Housewife

BY LOIS BLACKBURN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

German Measles, mumps, erythema infectiosum, all have made their mark, infecting boys, girls, men and women indiscriminately. One disease is much more restrictive in its choice of victim, however. Almost every housewife can expect to be afflicted sometime in the weeks ahead. While she is locked in its throes, her family makes many adjustments.

There's not much anyone can do to hasten the cure. But for their own safety, husband and children should know what to expect.

The sickness has been known for years as 'spring fever,' and while anyone may suffer its clutch—the housewife has a unique set of symptoms.

Bed-Rest No Cure

None have been known to take the disease lying down. While men and boys roope and girls daydream, women go into a paroxysm of motion. Most of it involves the arms, and, in sweeping gestures, nothing is safe from washing, scrubbing and polishing.

Anyone concerned about family pets, dogs, cats or canaries, would do well, when the disease makes itself apparent, to board the poor creatures out for a few weeks, or days, as the virulence indicates. And anyone who has special belongings—not easily recognizable as 'precious,' should protect himself with a large cardboard 'memoir box,' packed full, and well hidden.

Extreme skill is needed to recognize the malady in early stages. Gone are the days when one was shocked to awareness by mattresses and pillows hung on a line, or a hapless child or husband wielding a rug beater on the parlor carpet.

Cleaning Bug Bites

Though such visible signs may be lacking, no home is safe from the bite of the 'spring cleaning bug.' If the housewife in your house has not started her semi-annual chore, be assured that she is formulating plans for such an activity in the near future, though she may only accomplish one room at a time between the style and hat shows or salad luncheons that predominate the spring social calendar.

Where does this good woman start her cleaning? From attic cave down through the whole house to the basement? First, she informs friend or spouse that the upper hall needs painting and, though she can reach part of it, it really requires his professional touch. The man who prefers to use such talent painting his boat for the coming season had better be well prepared to resist the attack.

Annual Urge

Men will never understand how women get the urge to houseclean with snow still in the air. But it's as inevitable each spring as the swallows' flight to Capistrano.

The wise woman cleverly becomes an early bird with house work so when nice weather does arrive she may spend her days in her yard.

There are other ulterior motives to her early approach. Window washing enables her to spot the first feathered harbinger of spring—the robin. Clean windows help her keep tab on the blooming beauties in a neighbor's yard, and the number of tiny feet tramping new green shoots of grass into the ground as they cut through the yard to go to school.

Cleaning Types

A few slow starters on the spring cleaning trail prefer to clean all drawers in the house, then all the closets. When these sections are straightened, it is time for walls and woodwork, curtains and windows, furniture and floors.

Cleaning a room at a time gives that glow of accomplishment but also has the drawback of 'keeping the status quo' until the entire task is completed.

Members of the family will know instantly when housecleaning is in progress. The odor of cleaning supplies permeates the air. If oblivious to this, they will recognize the rash of casserole cooking, easy-to-fix TV dinners, or the call to bring home a bag of burgers from the nearest drive-in.

Whether it takes a week or a month to finish, the house cleaning chores, the 'straw boss' breathes a sigh of relief when it is done and listens patiently as Mrs. Clean proudly proclaims her accomplishments.

He knows the illness has run its course, and the family is safe for another season.

Paris Sporting Ruffly Necklines

If grandmother is still good at it, ask her to crochet some of those ruffly antimacassars for your necklines. The crisp, white wavy collar, is in like it hasn't been since Kitty Foyle.

Yves St. Laurent favors the school girl collar, a stiff, turtle-neck thing with a draw string around the edge. But the most favored are white bits of meringue which dip low towards the waist, showing off tans to a great advantage.

Pets for Everybody

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1 The novelty has worn off for fed creatures required feeding every two hours. Now they eat only three times a day. Naturally, some of this chore falls in Mon's lap when the youngsters are in school. She doesn't mind. Although she had never before lived on a farm, she is as taken with rural living as the children. She wouldn't consider moving back to town.

Friends Came to Help The Blohm children continue to go to St. John Catholic School, heard in the Blohm home. When in Seymour. They've kept the same friends they had before, but their conversations are likely to be different. A morning's greeting may be, "We got baby kittens at our house last night!" Their 'city' friends are swept along with the Blohm enthusiasm, and weekends often bring overnight guests, who gleefully take on a share of their friend's chores. None of the novelty has worn off for Kathleen, Barbara or Julie. Their mother believes they accept more responsibility than they did or would away from their pets. Last summer the children bought a package of mixed flower and vegetable seeds for a penny. "It was their garden, and they took care of it," Mrs. Blohm says of the children's mixture of edibles and 'look-alikes'. "What can I do?" is seldom heard in the Blohm home. When a day's tasks are finished, there are always fun things to do. A ride on the pony. A frolic with the lambs. A quiet hour watching baby chicks or rabbits get acquainted with the world. And in the spring, when fields begin to green and the sun makes faces pink, the Blohm youngsters live in a wonderful and exciting world of renewal and rebirth.

Home Furnishing Advice Proffered At World's Fair

How to use your budget for the establishment of a new home as wisely as possible, making each dollar perform its full service in the overall picture of rugs, furniture, fabrics, household equipment and accessories?

This is a problem hundreds of young brides — or young women who will be a bride before the year is over — are facing today and in the months ahead.

Edith Evans, editor of the former magazine, Living for Young Homemakers, now ambassador-at-large for the Pavilion of American Interiors, New York World's Fair, has valuable advice for these new homemakers.

Know Budget

Her first two suggestions — appraise your budget carefully and be knowledgeable about the 1964 home furnishings budget. In the quest for knowledge in home furnishings from living room to laundry, the homemaker-to-be will find the Pavilion exhibits a short but intensive course in beauty, style, comfort and practicality for the home, according to Mrs. Evans.

In this $2,300,000 Pavilion with walls of glass, 120 exhibitors, representing prestige names in the home furnishings industry, will show their merchandise in displays from model rooms to educational exhibits.

Reviewing her experience over many years as editor of a magazine directed to the interests of young homemakers, Mrs. Evans says that these are the questions every young woman planning her first home should ask herself:

Am I being wise in the selection of colors, choosing those which we will enjoy without regard to time? Are the colors for the upholstered pieces interchangeable from room to room? Are the pieces of furniture I am selecting well designed and will we want them in our home in the years to come? Am I buying only with the thought in mind of filling vacant spaces and acquiring temporary pieces to be discarded as soon as we can afford something else? Am I allotting my budget intelligently, so that the basic pieces are given first consideration with the less important things to be acquired later if necessary?

Brides Know Values

Mrs. Evans has both praise and encouragement for the young woman, 1964 model, who is entering upon matrimony. First, she says, a large percentage of these brides have been working since they left school and have acquired an understanding of the value of money and how to use it intelligently.

Giving encouragement to the bride who must assemble her home furnishings with a small budget, she says that today there is no premium on taste with relation to price. Modestly priced furniture, fabrics and floor coverings may be just as tasteful as those with imposing price tags. As a result of the emergence of good design in low priced home furnishings, tasteful and attractive rooms are within the range of a modest budget.

If the bride of today develops an understanding and viewpoint of good decoration, there is no reason why she should make mistakes.

Should Consult Fiance

One of the smartest things a bride-to-be can do, says Mrs. Evans, is to consult her fiance about the choice of home furnishings so that they share in the "extreme joy of creating a home". There is no better foundation for a happy married life, she continues, than a shared interest in establishing a home.

Exhibitors in the Pavilion of American Interiors, she concludes, will be alert to providing prospective homemakers with helpful information and materials which they can take home to study and absorb before making important decisions in the purchase of home furnishings.

Cost, Material, Guarantee Factors in Buying Carpets

In every field but carpets, the lead the manufacturer to shift things that consumers do to test product quality are legendary.

Cost and Material Set Price

On the used car lot, buyers have been known to kick the tires and in the supermarket to pinch grapefruit and squeeze tomatoes. Bedding stores say that customers push and poke at mattresses but seldom feel entirely sure of their purchase until they have climbed up on the display sample to lie down.

By comparison, carpet buyers are a serious lot. Circumstance works against any sort of flamboyance. Carpets are too expensive and too infrequently purchased to allow consumers much chance to get experience by trial and error. This accentuates the need for easily understood terms and information to explain how a carpet is put together and what makes it work successfully.

Wise shoppers who have survived this agony advise turning to a reputable retailer and carpets from brand name manufacturers—or better still turn to him after mastering those facts which can be applied to all carpets alike.

Similarity Misleading

The first such fact is to remember that carpet prices are determined by two things: the basic materials used and the care and artistry employed by the manufacturer in putting these materials together. The more of either of these elements going into a carpet, the higher the price. If the price is to be cut, something must be left out.

The stress on economy may lead the manufacturer to shift to cheaper materials, using less yarn in the wearing surface, or perhaps by going to a construction that takes fewer manufacturing operations. In this scheme of things, nylon and other fibers are ingredients, just as flour, milk and eggs are ingredients in a cake. Some of the newer man-made fibers such as carpet nylon outwear the natural fibers as much as four to one when the constructions being compared are equal. But in the density of the pile are not the place there are no real duplicates. Visual similarity is misleading. When less nylon is used, performance of the carpet is cut too. In fact, it is just as easy to make a bad carpet with nylon as it is with any other fiber.

Remember that all carpets of nylon are not the same. In fact, they are advertised at prices which vary greatly from square yard to square yard.

Construction Told

Understanding carpet construction is the key to spotting these differences. A carpet is made up of a series of layers. The top layer is the pile. Below it is the primary backing, to which the pile is attached by stitching or weaving. A secondary backing, recommended with all tufted carpets made of nylon, is the last layer. Latex, applied between the two backing layers, also locks the individual fibers to prevent pulling out.

Each of the parts fills a definite function. The carpet pile effects a feeling of luxury underfoot. This is determined by the height of the tufts and their density in any given area. The balance between these two factors affects the ability of pile fibers to remain on end in heavy use. The shorter the pile height, the closer the rows will have to be placed to do this job. If the rows are too far apart, the tufts tend to lie on their sides. As a result, surface texture effects are destroyed and the tendency to mat increases. Comparison of two carpet samples for pile density can be made by folding a sample double so that the backing between the rows is exposed. The sample with the heaviest pile is the one which shows the least amount of backing.

Form Determines Texture

Some carpets are advertised as being made of continuous filament nylon. This means that each strand in the yarn bundle is one long length. Ends can't pull out and shed or pill, an important factor for loop pile constructions. For cut pile and velvety textures, this isn't needed, so manufacturers use staple fiber. This is made up of short lengths. In other words, the texture to be made determines the physical form of nylon to be used. Absence of the familiar continuous filament description does not mean that something is wrong with the carpet.

Look For Certification

Another way to check the quality of nylon carpets is to look for a certification mark on the back of the carpet. Type of nylon and density of the pile are not the

Recording Musical Long Day's Work

BY MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If there's a bigger gamble than backing a Broadway musical, it must be betting on the "original cast" albums. The big record companies do it all the time.

RCA took the plunge for $75,000 on "Hello Dolly," and came up with a winner. The show opened in January, with long-legged big-eyed Carol Channing in the lead. The next morning the line at the box office was blocks long.

Baton Raised

RCA beaming corporately, rushed to cash in. At 10 o'clock Sunday morning, a hushed hour for show people, the cast assembled in a hall in Greenwich Village, ready to cut the "original cast" album.

A light shone red, the conductor raised his baton, and 40 musicians plunged into the opening number,

"Hello Dolly, Well Hello Dolly." Miss Channing, slim in aqua slacks and long-sleeved blouse, began to sing. It was going to be a long day.

In the engineering booth, two reels of tape began to spin and RCA was doubling its bet, now a sure thing. The day would cost $35,000 in production costs and a week's salary for each performer.

Cutting the records isn't at all like putting on the show—all in a piece. This recording session started and stopped dozens of times. "Hold it," the pianist said, "we weren't together," and the voice from the booth said "'Sunday Clothes,' take 2." The song started again.

'Try It Again'

Jerry Herman, the composer, waved his hand and there was another halt. Gower Champion, the director and choreographer, signalled and there was another back-up. After a take, the stars listened to a playback. "Try it again."

Box lunches at noon, coffee breaks in the afternoon, and a real rest from 5 to 7 p.m. Then back at it.

At 9:15 Miss Channing listened to a final playback and smiled. "I've never heard a record like this, it captures the whole show." By 10 p.m. the orchestra was packing—twelve hours of sweat but the "original cast" album was recorded.

The first week out it sold 80,000 copies. That was only the beginning.

Chorus Members and Orchestra show varied reactions as they hear themselves as they never can in a theater. The group is listening to a playback of 'Put on Your Sunday Clothes' during the 'Hello Dolly' cast recording in New York. The music comes from two stereo speakers in the foreground.

Acting As If Her facial expressions will come through in the music she sings, Carol Channing, star of 'Hello Dolly' pours her heart into the 12-hour recording session. The day cost a week's salary for each performer and $35,000 in production costs. At left, Miss Channing, Eileen Brennan and Sondra Lee maintain their enthusiasm during the long day's recording session as they sing 'Motherhood.' Sondra, four feet 10, had to stand on a box to balance her voice with that of tall Carol at the mike. They had to do the song twice, with prompting from director Gower Champion, to get an accepted recording. (AP Newsfeatures Photos)

...sent a letter to my love..'

BY SENA GRAY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Boy meets girl... boy proposes... girl's pen pal invited to wedding... pen pal meets bridegroom's brother... another wedding.

It all started in 1955. Almost every school child desires to have friends in other parts of the country or in other lands. Many add their names to a list in hope that someone will choose them to be their pen pal. Mrs. Carl Vanden Heuvel, 314 N. Summit St., did just that when she chose Miss Joni Bimonte of West Haven, Conn., as her correspondent. At that time, Mrs. Vanden Heuvel was Miss Bonnie Kasten, a student at Holy Angels Catholic School, Darboy.

Two months after their letter-writing friendship began, they added Miss Marilyn Kline, of Hastings, Pa., to their pen pal list.

They Never Met

The three girls kept up a lively correspondence for years, but never met each other.

Miss Bimonte 'came west' in April, 1961, for the wedding of Bonnie and Carl Vanden Heuvel. Joni liked it here so well that she returned to live and work in Appleton. A couple of days after she moved here, Joni met Robert Vanden Heuvel (Carl's brother). They would have met at the wedding, but Robert was in the service.

The meeting resulted in another Vanden Heuvel wedding—Joni and Robert were married last December.

Of course, Marilyn Kline, the pen pal from Pennsylvania, arrived in Appleton for the festivities. And the Vanden Heuvel family has another son, Don.

It may be a little late. Marilyn is engaged to a man in Pennsylvania.

Reading and Re-Reading stacks of old letters is a common pastime for the two couples. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Vanden Heuvel, left, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vanden Heuvel reminisce as they read letters at the Robert Vanden Heuvel home. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Jeff and John, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Vanden Heuvel, scamper and play on the floor as their aunt, left, and mother visit over a cup of coffee. The two women who started their friendship as pen pals nine years ago, married brothers, Robert and Carl Vanden Heuvel.

Good Design Shows Four Main Elements

JUDITH STELLWAGEN
County Home Economics Agent

Good design is a term frequently used in the home furnishings industry to describe four elements needed to create beauty and order in a room.

These four elements, line, texture, form and color, must be combined properly in individual pieces as well as in the entire room if a home is to appear beautiful and comfortable.

Furniture with predominantly straight lines gives an appearance of stability and force while curved lines reflect graceful, delicate effects. When the majority of lines are straight the room appears business like. Curved lines contribute a more elegant atmosphere.

Vertical Lines

Vertical lines create an illusion of height and slenderness, as in straight backed chairs.

Miss Stellwagen

tures go well with Early American furniture and ranch homes. Soft, silky textures create an elegant appearance and combine well with formal furnishings.

Textures should be considered in connection with light absorbing or reflecting properties. Stone, unpolished wood, carpeting, and burlap all absorb light. Satin, polished furniture, glass and tile reflect it.

Color Important

Color is one of the first items noticed when entering a room than horizontal lines, which and among the last forget too lead the eye across areas and when leaving. It is a powerful create a short, wide effect. Decorating tool for, with the diagonal lines are forceful and stimulating.

Common forms used are the effects. Because it is so powerful, square and rectangle, seen in ful, plan your color scheme. There are no restrictions on the combination of forms, as long as fire, or other hot objects, and they complement each other range from red to yellow on the color wheel. Cool colors, from green to blue and purple, are relaxing choices for bedrooms or libraries. Grays, tans, and other neutrals are versatile and last a long time before becoming tiresome.

Your Problems

Better to Give Than Receive, Ann Says of Charity Causes

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Every time I turn around I am asked to contribute to somebody's favorite charity. Where will it end? Almost every day's mail contains a heart-rending plea for a worthy cause. What disturbs me is that many of them are worthy.

I am against epilepsy, muscular dystrophy, heart disease, nephritis, polio, asthma, cancer, multiple sclerosis, mental illness, arthritis, mental retardation, tuberculosis and blindness. I would like to see all underprivileged boys sent to camp and all unwed mothers taken care of in first-rate homes.

I am for the Red Cross, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Campfire Girls, Boy's Town, and the Visiting Nurses Association. The United Fund and Community Chest Drives must be supported. And of course we have to give to our church and its missionaries.

What I want to know is this. When I am broke from giving goose down as the latest quilted to all these worthy causes who will take care of me.

—John Q. Public

Dear John: I'm not going to worry about you. Bub. The tone of your letter suggests you will never be broke from giving.

Many organizations are indeed competing for our dollars, so each of us must offer what support we can to those organizations in which we believe. This calls for selective judgement.

The United Fund or Community Chest embrace many groups so these are a must. Do for others what you can—or wish. As for me, I thank God I am giving and not receiving.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A few years ago when our son entered high school we bought him a second hand French horn so he could play in the band. Fritz wasn't very good but he got by.

A year later he showed more interest and practiced regularly. He asked for a new horn for Christmas so we bought him one. French horns are not cheap, but we were glad to spend the money because it was what Fritz wanted most.

Last year he graduated from high school. He has not taken the horn out of the case since. The question is this: If we sell the horn who should get the money? I say the money belongs to us. My wife says the money belongs to Fritz since it is his horn. You will decide.

—Indianapolis

Dear Indianapolis: The horn belongs to Fritz. You gave it to him for Christmas remember? If it is sold, he should get the money.

I hope the horn is not sold, however, on the off chance that Fritz may become interested again. Or perhaps his son will play it.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The new fabric is light-weight and warm, and may be a great lope.

'With All the Ribbons on It...'

Hundreds of mothers in the Fox Cities will attest to the problems of getting a family of girls ready for Easter morning church services. Most of them take it in stride, letting the older ones help the younger and generally maintaining tempers in good order on this most special day.

Mrs. Robert Caldwell was master of preparations' herself this morning as she readied her daughters for services at the First English Lutheran Church, which the family attends together every week. "For an hour they can be pretty good," the attractive young homemaker smiles.

All the Caldwell girls had new outfits today. Debbie, just turned two, and her sisters, Julianne and Leanne, one-year-old March 19, received new dresses that Grandma made. Their coats were birthday presents. Adding to the frills that little girls love were bonnets of ribbon and lace, and lace edging on their little white socks.

Expected a Boy

Jan Caldwell handles her babies with skill and ease. Having twins was a surprise—the doctor had told her to expect a nice big boy. Julianne and Leanne each weighed five pounds, eight and a half ounces at birth, and their parents are pleased as can be with them. Debbie, a very grown up year ahead of them, is now teaching them all sorts of things they shouldn't know, their mother laughs. "Like how to get into mischief."

The girls all wear the same size, and at first glance, people often mistake them for triplets. Their mother says the three have two matching outfits, and she's grateful for sewing grandmothers.

The Caldwells have been married four years. Her hometown is Silver Spring, N. and Mr. Caldwell is from Logansport, Ind. He is a salesman for Servicemaster.

Doesn't Worry

Jan Caldwell says her mother told her a long time ago, as her mother had told her, that in 20 years no one would remember how she kept her house. So she doesn't worry about the toys that three little girls naturally trail behind. Instead she concentrates on caring for them and giving them all the affection babies want. The important thing now is her children.

When the twins were younger, keeping up the diaper marathon was a time consuming task. The twins were afflicted with eczema and had to be kept dry. They were on similar feeding schedules, however, so a minimum of time was devoted to that. They're still on similar feedings, as evidenced by their attempting to eat the planter on the coffee table this week.

Learned to Relax

Mrs. Caldwell says she doesn't worry about the twins as she did Debbie. She's learned to be relaxed with them, to do what's important and forget what isn't.

And when anyone is in trouble, or misbehaving, Debbie is right there with a "no, no" or a "Mama!"

And on Easter, when the Caldwells join the rest of the Fox Cities Churchgoers, a certain young man is proud to let people know "these are my girls."

'Well, my baby better get ready too...'

'I promise, I promise I won't move...'

'One and a half down, one and a half to go...'

'I love my new outfit, Mama...'

'Hey, she's got a new dress...'

'You mean it happens every year?'

'Now give me 10 seconds and I'll be ready...'

House of the Week

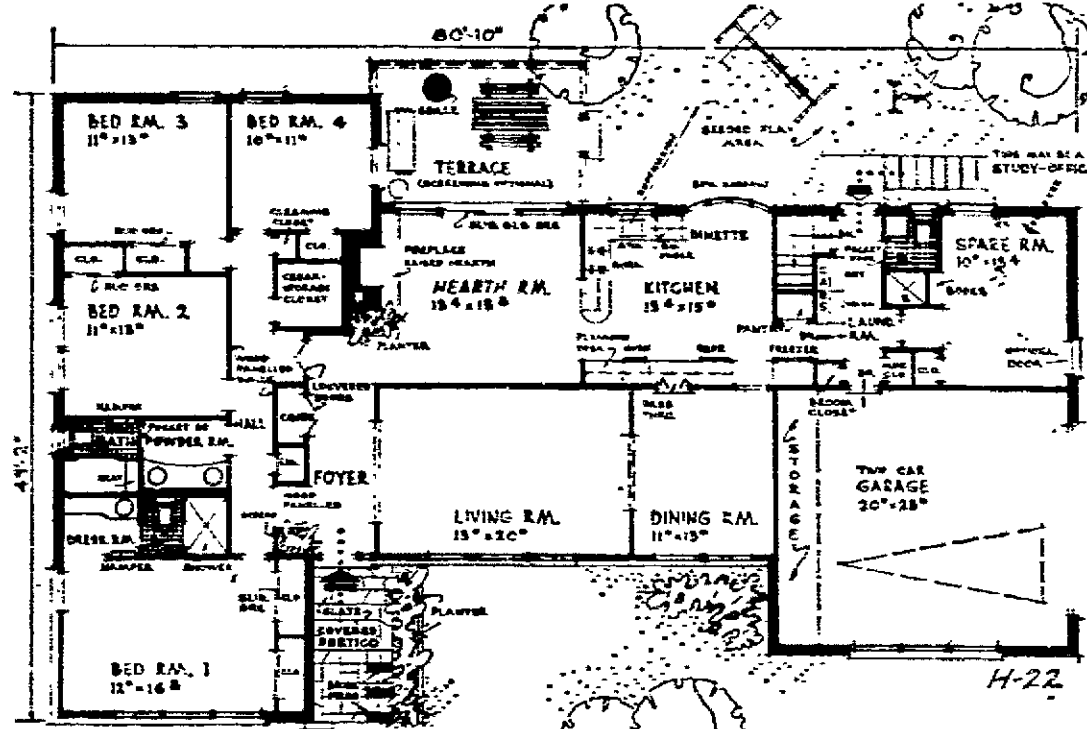

The most important consideration a person should give a new home, if one were forced to choose, is not the exterior but the floor plan—not what you look at, but what you live in. But who wants to live in something he doesn't like, a house that doesn't reflect his own taste and personality?

The Traditional Design Is for those who prefer a more conservative approach in home design. This facade offers used brick, hand split shingles, small

A four or five bedroom one-story home with 2,076 square feet of living area over the cellar and 350 square feet over the slab for a total habitable area of 3,426 square feet. Garage and storage add 504 square feet. Covered portico is 74 square feet. Garage doors can be located in front if desired.

This was the problem architect Herman H. York tackled when he designed today's House of the Week. He wanted, first of all, a floor plan which answers the needs of up-to-date living: one-story arrangement with four bedrooms and a spare room, three full baths, family room, kitchen with dinette, basement, double garage, all put together for maximum convenience and privacy and ease of traffic flow for a busy family.

But what about the exterior? Should it be traditional; that is, the sort of comfortable architecture which offers refinements of proven techniques but nothing drastic? Or should it be what the architects call contemporary and the laymen call modern—a reflection of present day thinking which, at the same time, avoids avant garde experiments?

This house offers a choice of either. With the same fine floor plan, you can take your pick of traditional or contemporary facade.

Best of the Past

The traditional offers an exterior featuring used brick, hand split shingles double hung small pane windows, shutters and decorative panels, dove cote, arched portico, diamond paned front door and other touches which reflect the best home architecture of previous generations.

The contemporary house uses Roman brick laid in stacked bond, accents of stone, vertical boards, horizontal windows, no shutters, flush front door, wide overhangs, a post and beam appearance for the gable ends, flush accent panels, modern light fixtures—an over-all effect of length with emphasis on form rather than detail.

Whichever exterior design you choose, the interior remains the same.

In either case a covered main entry with slate floor edged with a masonry planter leads to a central foyer which funnels traffic to all areas of the house. The foyer and all hall areas have wood paneled walls, an economical feature because of the low maintenance; as well as an attractive one no matter what the exterior decor.

'Hearth Room'

Architect York calls the family room a "hearth room" because this is the location of the fireplace. "The fireplace is intended to be used," says York, "and it will get far more use in this room than it would in the formal living room."

Adjoining the family (or "hearth") room is the kitchen which has space for a dinette in front of a cozy bow window and which offers excellent supervision of the backyard play area.

The laundry and mud closet are adjacent to the kitchen at the rear service entry. This also is the location of a full bath, convenient to both the house-keeping area and the backyard, to the garage workbench and the basement stairs, and also to a spare room which can be used as a guest room, den, or even an apartment for relatives.

Bedroom Wing

The bedroom wing is laid out with excellent sound buffers between it and the living area. There is an abundance of closet space in all the bedrooms, and the master bedroom has an adjoining dressing and bath alcove. The hall bathroom has a twin lavatory in a split arrangement which permits greater flexibility in use during the day.

The garage doors could be located on the front of the house if lot size prohibits side entry. This plan would be less desirable, but would not interfere with the architectural design larger than expected. Very often whichever facade is selected, this is apt to bring an estate contemporary or traditional.

With Either Exterior, the Room arrangement of the floor plan takes present day needs into consideration. The main level habitable area is 2,076 square foot not counting the 504 square feet of the garage and the 74 square foot covered patio.

Your Life Insurance

QUESTION: If I should die by accident, would the extra double indemnity payment on my life insurance policy go into my taxable estate?

ANSWER: Yes, if you have kept title to your policy. That is, if you have not assigned it to anyone, in which case it is not your property and would not be a part of your estate. The unassigned life insurance proceeds are included in taxable estate, after the basic exemption of $60,000 ($120,000 under the marital deduction). The double indemnity payment is just as much life insurance as the base amount.

It is wise of you to take this into account in your estate plan. This plan would be less desirable, but would not interfere with the architectural design larger than expected. Very often whichever facade is selected, this is apt to bring an estate contemporary or traditional.

wise there might be no tax. A man with a $35,000 home, $15,000 savings and securities and $50,000 life insurance with a marital deduction, would have no tax, but with a double indemnity payment added on the life insurance portion, there would probably be taxable estate in excess of $120,000 exemption.

QUESTION: What is a life insurance tither? I've seen this expression and don't understand what it means.

ANSWER: This is an expression often used to refer to persons who put 10 per cent or more of their income into life insurance.

employees. At the $5,000 income level, it might mean $25,000 to $30,000 of insurance. As a matter of fact, a recent survey showed that among families with two or more children (reflecting broad insurance needs), well over one-fourth were putting from 5 per cent to 15 per cent into life insurance. Those 15 per cent families at the $10,000 income level would probably be covered with something like $80,000 of life insurance. So you can see that life insurance tithers are relatively well insured families. The large and growing number of families in this category shows how extensively American families have turned to life insurance as the base of their family financial planning.

"Your Life Insurance" is presented each Sunday as a public service in cooperation with the Northwestern Wisconsin Chapter of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters. Address queries to "Life Insurance Editor" of the Sunday Post-Crescent.

Daily Bread Exhibit at Paine Center

OSHKOSH—The results of a press photographer's assignment to picture the winner of a national "bake-off" will be the subject of an art show opening at the Paine Art Center on Wednesday.

The exhibit is the extensive picture essay "Our Daily Bread," by photographer Erich Hartmann in the manner of the great "Family of Man" by Edward Steichen.

Hartmann's "bake-off" assignment in 1954 led him to a deep interest in the production of wheat, the making of pastry and bread and their meaning to man's daily life. In his travels through the United States, Europe and the Middle East since his first assignment, he collected 124 photographs related to the subject.

The exhibit, first shown by the Pillsbury Co. at the Fifth International Food Congress in New York in 1962, is a selection of 46 of these photographs. The Pillsbury Co. loaned the exhibit to the Center for this show which will hang through April.

The Range of the One-Man show by William Buxton at the Bergstrom Art Center stretches from turbulent, realistic seascapes to architectural abstractions as seen above in an oil entitled "Tower Structures." The show will hang until April 13.

Bergstrom's Buxton Show Proves Popular

NEENAH—The one-man show in Buxton's works While his of works by William Buxton at earlier seascapes were turbulent the Bergstrom Art Center is and angry — proper exercises proving to be one of the more for youth — many of the water popular to be hung this season. scenes now have taken on a it is a gratifying acknowledgment of the artist's skill and talent ment of a growing artist whose might reflect his state of mind in roots are in the Fox Cities.

The 27-year-old artist is a This reach for the essential of mood and drama in Buxton's works has led him to a progressive abstraction. Gone are some of the fine details and nuances present in his earlier works. In their stead are sure lines of color and suggestive form. In the works where the eye still can find familiarity, the abstraction heightens the mood. However, where the familiarity is lost or diluted, there appears to be a need for more analysis of the use of color—a lack of subtlety that pulls the conception short of the mark.

These apparent shortcomings, however, have failed to dampen the reception of the show. Sales last week and the general enthusiasm over the paintings indicate that Buxton has found a touchstone that enables him to please a wide range of galleries.

It is good to see the Fox Cities denying the old saw about withholding honor from their own. May Buxton continue to bring his works home periodically as he grows.

One of the salient features of the exhibit is Buxton's drive toward abstraction leading to a subdued form of action painting. In some of the works his palette has been lightened, often reflecting his own pink and blue coloring. However, most of the works are muted or tied to the blue and green of his favorite seascape subjects.

Perhaps the most pleasing surprise is the collection of watercolors on exhibit. Buxton reveals a sure hand in the technique and his use of the wet-on-wet method evokes haunting moods in his representations of the north Wisconsin lake country in which he said he spent the happiest hours of his boyhood.

Michelangelo's Exquisite 'Pieta' Prepared for Trip to World Fair

BY BENNETT M. MOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP) — One of the most perfect marble masterpieces of all time, Michelangelo's Pieta, sails from Naples next Sunday for the New York World's Fair.

The priceless white carara representation of Mary grieving over the body of Christ will be packed for the eight-day Atlantic crossing on the liner Cristoforo Colombo in triple containers of wood and steel. It is being treated for what it is — irreplaceable.

Keeping the 465-year-old Pieta in one piece has worried Italians and art experts ever since Pope John XXIII told Francis Cardinal Spellman two years ago that the statue would be allowed to grace the Vatican pavilion at the fair.

Big Debate

The argumentative fallout from that explosive announcement was still floating around two years later.

The conservative Rome daily newspaper Il Tempo chided, in an acid commentary entitled, "A Bit of Piety for the Pieta," that "a sense of history, a sense of responsibility, or just plain common sense, opposes that vacuous and dangerous exhibition," of sending the statue abroad.

Cardinal Spellman put his defense on the forecast that 70 million visitors at the Vatican pavilion will see the Pieta in the 19 months after the April 22 opening — compared with the one million persons who view it in a single year at St. Peter's Basilica.

70 Million

"Those people who criticize me for asking the Holy Father for the loan of the statue have money to go to St. Peter's to see it for themselves," said the cardinal-archbishop of New York.

"But I want 70 million people to see it here free."

Packing the Pieta begins Friday. It will be slid off its pedestal with all the fuss of a royal potentate stepping from a jade throne. Statuary experts and the Vatican's maintenance men, will case it along a wooden platform to its first case. Plain laundry soap will grease the way.

Shipping Care

For its 3,350-mile journey, the Pieta will be wrapped in linen and paper and rigidly braced inside its first wooden container. This box fits in wood shavings snugly inside the second wooden crate, which likewise rests in a bed of shavings inside the outer steel case.

What farguers will see is a double-figured statue 6 feet 7 inches high and almost as wide. An almost life-size Mary, supporting her Son's body across her lap. His head hung back in death and His arms and legs dangling.

Bergstrom Friends To See Film About December, '62, Show

NEENAH — The Friends of Bergstrom organization, and its guests will be able to revisit the Bergstrom Art Center's "Heirloom" art show of December, 1962, on Tuesday when the film "A Brush With History" is presented at the Center at 8 p.m.

The film, produced by James M. Veen and Jay T. Joslyn, both of Menasha, is an examination of the unique exhibit which featured folk, primitive and antique artworks borrowed from Fox Cities residents. It is a color film and uses the "action from stills" technique introduced by the Project XX teams for television productions.

After filmed the movie and Joslyn narrates it. The team won a certificate of merit from the Wisconsin State Historical Society for an earlier film, "The Heart of the City" which depicted a year's activities of the Menasha Historical Society. Auer's wife, Marilyn, will accompany him the film with folk music.

Michelangelo's Roman patron, a banker named Jacopo Galli, promised the cardinal in a contract that "the said Michelangelo will complete the said work within one year's time and it will be the most beautiful work of marble ever seen in Rome and no other master will be able to surpass it."

Nine months later in May 1499, the Pieta was finished. The cardinal paid Michelangelo 450 gold ducats, equal to $1,000 — a far cry from the $10-million in our literature? Mention three characters with a line about after graduation. His America five centuries later.

Veteran Actress Calls for Stronger Dramatic Literature for U. S. Stage

BY JAY JOSLYN

Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

One of the major ailments of the not-so-imaginary invalid of Broadway—the theater—is the distressing "disability of playwrights," according to Anne Revere, the veteran prizewinning stage and screen actress who spoke at the Fox Valley University of Wisconsin Center last week.

She said the theater is at a point where it must choose between "lipstick and lifeblood" in its literature and indicated that for some years "lipstick" has been holding sway.

This move away from the "distilled essence of life" which should form the backbone of dramatic literature, she said, came from the atmosphere of political criticism rising out of the activities of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Miller Denial

Arthur Miller was an example she used of this withdrawal from tackling the problems of relations between individuals. She recalled that Miller's "Crucible," written during the McCarthy investigations, marked the change in the viewpoint with which Miller had graced the stage with his most powerful plays.

So afraid was Miller of personal involvement with McCarthy, she said, that he denied the topical references that critics and audiences saw in Miller's Salem trial drama.

The result of this withdrawal, she said, is evident in his latest work, "After the Fall," in which he makes the audience become a psychoanalyst while he pours out the problems of his soul tormented by the guilt of his inability to express or even feel emotion.

"The Deputy," she said, is a good current example of mov-ing drama. Since it asks the question of the extent of man's being his brother's keeper, its viewpoint must go beyond self-ish concerns. The reaction to the play, she pointed out, indicates its ability to involve the audience.

Television, she said, is likely to force the theater to move back to this real drama because even youngsters fed with dra-matic cliches by the medium will not accept the same kind of cliches on the stage. TV has destroyed the time when a sophisticated audience could be amused and moved by such as "The Cat and the Canary," she said.

Regional Theater

As she turned to the regional and community theater for a renewal of the acting profes-sion, she indicated that the new dramatic literature is likely to come from this field as well.

Until better dramatic litera-ture does develop, she urged the regional theater—and by in-ference Broadway as well—to dip into the backlog of master works of all languages.

She said the current off-"Bandaiera" by Osser, "Polka Broadway production of "The and Fugue" by Weinberger as Trojan Women", despite its an-well as numbers featuring solo trinity and distant locale, is more tonical and moving than anything on Broadway, with the exception of "The Deputy."

Name Change Big Bargain, But Few Take Advantage of It

Cost for Court Action Is $1
Six Petition in Six Years

Although it only costs $1 to two a year would be a large have a name changed legally, there are precious few people in Outagamie County who take advantage of the bargain.

In fact, Circuit Court records show in the past six years only six people have bothered to petition the court to have their names changed. Five of the six petitioners were young women who sought name changes to correspond with the last names of stepparents.

The sixth person, a 70 year old farmer, sought to have his last name shortened to eliminate a foreign-sounding ending. The name he sought was one he had been using practically all his life, but had failed to petition the court for the legal change.

Cases Unusual

Clerk of Courts Sydney Shannon said petitions for name changes are among "unusual" court cases nowadays. He said

Circuit Judge Andrew W. Parnell said he could recall no petitions which he denied. The name becomes officially changed when the court order is signed (generally without the formality of a public hearing) and a notice of the change is published in a newspaper.

Old court records in Outagamie County courthouse show no requests for name changes. It is believed in early days, name changes were less formal and only required the name-bearer to report to his friends he no longer would be known by one name, but would now be known by another.

State Statutes

State statutes entitle anyone in the state to change his name with the exception of persons engaged in the professions for which licenses are issued.

For professionally licensed persons, a hearing before a board which governs that particular profession must be held, and the board must determine the name change will not unfairly compete with another person in the profession or will not be a detriment to the public or the profession.

The statute does not pertain to school teachers and does not require professionally - licensed individuals who get married to request a hearing.

Other Requests

The stipulation also does not require a hearing for those professions which are not governed by a board or commission.

In Wisconsin, persons who are born or married within the state and receive a legally changed name, must report the changes to the state registrar of vital statistics where the necessary changes are made in the records.

The change is automatically received by the county register of deeds who records the name change in the county records. It is for this change the $1 fee is levied.

Recent Changes

Name changes were granted recently to a young girl who wished to become legally known with the last name of her stepfather. She had used the name for several years, but when she sought employment after high school, she found she did not legally own her name.

In another case, a child born to an unmarried woman sought years later to have her name changed to that of her stepfather, a name she had also been using illegally for years.

Legal Pliht

In most cases the petitioner had been using the sought-after last name until he or she came dividuals and groups separately face to face with a legal plight in the which required use of the prop- various classes for solo and en-semble events. New Contestants

"We are looking forward to Menasha St. Mary and Appleton Xavier entering our district festival for the first time," commented Lawrence Skilbred, retired Fond du Lac public schools music director, who is executive secretary of the East Central Wisconsin Music Association.

Fond du Lac has "open district" competition with both public and parochial schools participating.

The April and May events will attract thousands of student musicians, and all will get the red carpet treatment from public officials and the Fond du Lac Chamber of Commerce.

Students do not compete against each other for ratings. However, the judges rate the individual and groups separately face to face with a legal plight in the which required use of the prop- various classes for solo and en-semble events. Family Awaits Word on Son In Anchorage boys admitted smoking at least one day a week. There were 4.5 per cent of the boys and 4.9 per cent of the girls. Another 49 per cent of the girls said they tried smoking and 46 per cent did not.

Chicago woman, after trying unsuccessfully to reach the swamped Chicago Red Cross office to ask about her son, finally wound up calling her sister here who put the call through the Appleton office.

The sophomore boys smoke 18 per cent less than their freshmen counterparts, the survey indicates. Only 4.6 per cent of the sophomores indicated smoking a half a pack or more per day as compared to 6.4 per cent of the freshmen.

The remaining sophomore boys are divided, with 67 per cent trying smoking and 23 per cent never having tried cigarettes.

10th Grade Girls

Girls of the 10th grade were even in smoking everyday but less than a half a pack and at least once a week at 6.8 per cent. Thirty-nine per cent said they had tried, 47 per cent had the profession.

The percentages start to indicate regular smoking more in the junior class with 11.8 per cent of the boys and 8.9 per cent of the girls indicating that they smoke a half a pack or more per day.

In the remaining portion of the class, 7.6 per cent of the boys and 4.5 per cent of the girls smoke every day, and 3.9 per cent of the boys and 3.9 per cent of the girls smoke at least once a week.

Fifty-three per cent of the boys and 49 per cent of the girls indicated they had never smoked.

"Get the Habit"

The trend of more smoking was carried on to the senior class. It is here that students really "get the habit." If a teen-ager smokes regularly upon graduation from high school, chances are very good that he or she will continue throughout life.

A total of 12.5 per cent of the senior boys indicated smoking at least a half a pack per day in comparison to 2.7 per cent of the girls. Smoking everyday but less than a half a pack were 7.5 per cent of the boys and 8.1 per cent of the girls. One day a week smoking was indicated by 7.5 per cent of the boys and 2.7 per cent of the girls. Fifty per cent of the boys had tried smoking as compared with 6.2 per cent of the girls.

Sating they never tried smoking were 22.5 per cent of the senior boys and 24.3 per cent of the girls.

Trend Increases

Evaluation of the statistics shows an increased trend toward more and more smoking by the students.

Chilton High School is taking steps to curb this trend. Included in the curriculum are lessons pointing out the dangers of smoking and how it injures one physically.

Menasha Man Suffers Fatal Heart Attack At Shopping Center

A Menasha man was pronounced dead on arrival at 3:30 p.m. Saturday at St. Elizabeth Hospital after having a heart attack while shopping at Valley Fair Shopping Center.

Civil Rights Groups Lash At Wallace

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Civil rights groups protesting the pro-segregationist views of Alabama Gov. George Wallace marched along Wisconsin Ave. Saturday to a hotel which is headquarters for his Democratic campaign in the state's presidential primary.

Some 175 marchers, who had received a police permit, assembled at the Memorial Center and took 40 minutes to walk the mile to the Schroeder Hotel. The group included several Roman Catholic nuns.

Wallace returned to Montgomery, Ala. Friday night after his second week of Wisconsin appearances in efforts to defeat Gov. John W. Reynolds, a favorite son candidate pledged to President Johnson. Wallace was not expected back in the state until Monday.

Among signs toled by the marchers was one reading: "Wallace Is Rotten To The CORE." CORE is in reference to the Congress of Racial Equality, one of the organizations sponsoring the march.

After reaching the hotel a small number of the demonstrators remained to picket.

Malcolm X Denies Plans To Raid Sect

CHICAGO (AP)—Malcolm X said Saturday he has no intention of raiding the Black Muslim sect of its membership and that he is not forming a splinter group.

"I was put out of the Nation of Islam," he said, "but my hope is that the others will stay in."

His work, he said, is among the other so-called Negroes outside the sect. "Until his break with the Black Muslims, Malcolm was considered second in command to Elijah Muhammad. His religion is still Islam," Malcolm said, "and he still considers Muhammad his spiritual leader. Malcolm was in Chicago for a television interview."

He said an attack on him Thursday by his brother, Philbert X, was engineered by "someone else."

"You never heard of my brother before," Malcolm said. "He was very obscure, but this was a chance to get his picture in the paper. He was trying to keep his job and a script was put in his hands by someone else."

Only the highest-priority calls were being accepted from here to Anchorage.

An Associated Press 24-hour leased circuit with the Alaska communications system provided a link between the Seattle bureau of The AP and radio station KENT in Anchorage.

Pneumonitis is an inflammation of the lung. It developed in midweek MacArthur was operated on Monday for internal bleeding which developed after an earlier gall bladder operation.

Poison Arrow Kills Belgian Priest as He Tries to Make Peace

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A Belgian priest was killed by a poison arrow as he attempted to protect Moslem villagers from marauding Christian tribesmen in eastern India, an informed source said today.

The Rev. Herman Rasschert, a Jesuit, was the first reported foreign casualty in the wave of religious rioting that has plagued India for 13 days. The source said Father Rasschert was struck when he tried to halt Adivasi tribesmen from looting and burning Giria Village in southern Bihar State.

The Indian army clashed four times with the tribesmen, and some deaths were reported. The tribesmen have been enraged by anti-Christian activities in Moslem East Pakistan.

60-Cent Investment Starts Lifelong Hobby of Pigeons

Kaukauna Man Begins Raising Birds While in Fourth Grade

KAUKAUNA — A 60-cent investment in most fowl, disease can spread rapidly. It is not uncommon for the start of a life-long hobby of raising pigeons from different parts of the country to exchange birds and for John Kerscher, and his hobby has gained him a wide reputation for his knowledge of the pigeons, particularly the muffed variety.

His hobby started when John was a fourth grader. He recalls how a friend, Bill Garvey, purchased two homing pigeons and two muffed tumblers. Kerscher decided he had to have the tumblers.

He informed Garvey the two tumblers were males and offered to take them off his hands for the 75 cents which Garvey had paid. Garvey didn't believe him and insisted he would keep and raise the birds. After several weeks went by without the hen laying, Kerscher again informed his friend both birds were males and offered to buy them.

Cuts Price

This time Garvey believed the story and offered to sell for 75 cents. Kerscher said he had only 69 cents and the deal was closed. Shortly after Kerscher took the birds home, one of the "males" laid an egg and his hobby was underway.

Muffed tumblers are so called for two reasons. The feet of the birds are completely covered with long feathers, and when flying, the bird often tumbles earthward as though losing its equilibrium before coming out of the fall and rising into the air to repeat the procedure.

Kerscher recalls how his single pair of muffed tumblers grew and at one time tumblers were numerous in Kaukauna. The late Phil Zwick, well-known boxer from Kaukauna, raised a lot of tumblers, recalls Kerscher. In the early days all the tumblers were red and white. Today the pure white is non-existent, but breeders such as Kerscher, are trying to bring back the white.

Colors presently judged in shows are blacks, yellows, and reds. Kerscher's birds no longer fly. They are bred solely for shows and competition. He has a small outside exercise pen on his two coops for the birds to keep in condition. He usually maintains about 27 pair of the birds.

First Show

He entered his first show at Fond du Lac in 1931 and walked off with a ribbon. Since that time he has won so many ribbons, medals, trophies and cash awards he has lost count. He enters several shows a year, either traveling or sending his birds to all parts of the country.

Usually he enters 12 to 18 birds in a show. Once a bird has won, Kerscher does not enjoy entering it in competition again because it could win "over and over again," he says. Cash won in competition pays for the feed and care of the birds for the year and reimburses the owner for other expenses including travel to shows.

His reputation as a man who knows birds spread and he has served as judge for hundreds of pigeon shows including state fair competition. Last year he was called on to judge in international competition in Canada. Judges base their decisions on comparisons between an artist's sketch of a perfect bird and the bird entered.

Feathers, eye coloring, beak size and location, and many other items are studied carefully in the judging. Kerscher is a charter member of the Valley Pigeon Club, one of the largest in the state, and served as president from 1948 to 1953. Although not an expensive hobby, a good pair of tumblers could bring $250 and a good pair of "clean legs" could bring $500, noted Kerscher.

Clips Muffs

When a muffed tumbler is bred, the pigeon owner immediately clips the muffs to prevent egg breakage. Once the tumbler lays, Kerscher transfers the eggs from the tumbler to a setting roller. The roller is much more gentle, and once the eggs are hatched, does a better job of feeding the young bird.

When the youngster becomes slightly stronger, Kerscher transfers it to a coop with a feeding homer as this mother bird does a "good job of feeding and helps fill out the tumbler more rapidly," stated Kerscher. None of the adopted mothers seems to recognize the youngster as a stranger and raises it as its own.

Diets of the birds are watched carefully, and extreme caution is taken if sickness develops in one of the pigeons. As

The Kaukauna man really enjoys his hobby and is always ready to "talk pigeons." He currently is trying to interest some neighborhood youngsters in the hobby to insure the continuation of pigeon raising for hobby and show.

In judging, birds are divided into old cocks, old hens, young cocks and young hens. The best of each category are selected. These then are placed together and if striking faults are noted for the final judging and the best which will not permit the bird to be placed in show competition, several with which he refuses to be shown is not kept. Usually a pair and noted a few very good show birds are bred for four young birds that appear to be or five settings. Mating of birds developing into fine show birds, is done early in the year to permit the young to develop and like an awkward pile of feathered baby feathers before the summer judging starts.

Holding One of the Muffed tumbler pigeons which have won him more medals, trophies and ribbons than he can remember is John Kerscher, Kaukauna, long time pigeon fancier. Also pictured are a few of the birds in the exercise pens. Kerscher and some of his many trophies and the coops in which the birds are quartered. (Post-Crescent Photo)

'The Martin House'

Historic Home Purchase Passes Initial Phase

GREEN BAY — The initial who completed the redecoration step toward preserving "The and renovation. The property Martin House" has been come into the ownership of the pleted by the Hazelwood Fund late R. E. "Curly" Lambeau Committee. A down payment of $10,000 has been deposited with the executors of the Lambeau year.

People interested in history and the preservation of historic sites tried to convince the Green Bay City Council and the Brown County Board in purchasing the attractions of the city—the Port Howard buildings, the Cotton House, the Baird law office and the Ro-Porlier-Tank cottage. The Martin was originator and promoter of the trans-Wisconsin waterway that developed Fox River power possibilities. With his older cousin, James D. Doty, Oct. 16 of last year, the Hazel-Martin exerted his influence throughout the state in its earliest days.

The Martin House was the site of much of the planning for the Martin-Doty enterprises. His widow survived him by 44 years and was instrumental in helping preserve historic sites in Green Bay and in writing that if the committee is unable to make the purchase within two years all funds collected will be returned to the donors.

The Martin House was purchased by Mrs. Flora Clisby in 1937, six years after Martin's widow died. She modernized the building but left it structurally authentic to the original period. Shortly after the purchase, Mrs. Clisby died and her grandson and heir, the late John Walter, sold it to Dr. Ralph Carter.

Bacon Rinds for Bookmarks

'Lost' Articles Provide Humor, Small Headaches for Librarians

There's a great deal more than forgetfulness behind the accumulation of articles left by patrons of the Appleton Public Library. Maybe what they've encountered on the printed page has taken some of them into flights of fancy -- daydreaming we call it.

Whatever the reason, personnel at the library discover a new dimension in the oddities of dealing with the public when they take inventory of the "things which don't belong." It's one of those small headaches -- unwanted, but accepted as somehow inevitable.

A Bit of Humor

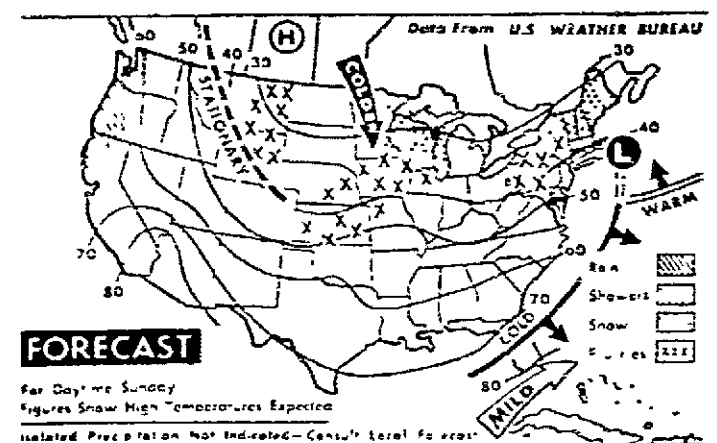

Once in a while the forgotten things ever provide a bit of humor. Like the bacon rind found doing service as a bookmark in the upstairs children's department. Or the open tin of sardines found in the downstairs book stacks -- with two lonely sardines still uneaten and not even a cracker crumb for company.

The lost-and-found containers at the check out desks are the gathering place for a variety of not so surprising gloves, mittens, wool knit caps, school papers, pencil holders and similar student articles.

But the cartons also contain keys, missals, a small Bible and quite often small store purchases.

per cent over February, 1963, sales, according to Edwin L. Bersagel, state director for the Wisconsin Savings Bonds division.

Sales totals in the four-county Fox Cities area and per cent of year's goal achieved through January and February are: Calumet, $40,968, 18.8 Outagamie, $114,868, 18.5 Waupaca, $32,181, 20.1, and Winnebago, $168,337, 15.7.

New England and Northern Appalachians can expect snow and snow flurries today as can the upper Lakes region, upper Mississippi valley, central Plains, northern Rockies. If I Were A Young Man

If I were a young man beginning a business career, I would shave every morning. If I had shaved the night before, I would shave again the next morning before going to work.

I would have my hair cut at least every two weeks and I would keep my fingernails short and clean.

I would own enough dress shirts so that I might wear a fresh one every day.

I would own at least three suits—carefully selected for color... and would insist upon being properly fitted. I would wear my best suits to work. I wouldn't save them only for social occasions. I would keep them well-cleaned and pressed.

I would own a minimum of one pair of brown shoes and one pair of black shoes and keep them well shined.

I would wear a hat, since my college days are over.

If it were necessary for my wife and my family to make sacrifices to help me attain certain goals, it would be my duty to convince them that this joint effort would pay future dividends. If I am to be in business for their living and mine, my family should give me the opportunity to make the best possible use of what talent I may have. My family's stake in my future must definitely not be overlooked.

I would be sincere and conscientious in my work and neat in my appearance. My associates then would be more tolerant of any shortcomings and, in fact, would then be much more likely to help me overcome them and attain the self-confidence necessary for my success.

And when I did gain full self-confidence, I would be on my way and I would start investing my earnings in my family. But I would never forget that a businessman is like an automobile. He performs best when he is shined up, inside and out.

When you look your best you do your best!

Kennedy Has Open Mind on Second Spot

Attorney General Isn't Talking About Vice Presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy was represented by associates Saturday as doing what comes naturally by keeping his mind open and his mouth closed about the Democratic vice presidential nomination.

Kennedy has committed himself only to leaving the Cabinet after the November election. This was no new decision. He told this reporter two weeks before the assassination of his brother, President John F. Kennedy, that he intended to resign as attorney general after the election.

Then, as now, Kennedy said he had not made up his mind what he would do. He had not ruled out the possibility that he would remain as a presidential adviser. But it seemed to his interviewer he was leaning toward a temporary turn to non-official life that could lead to a future bid for office on his own.

Kennedy's relationship with his brother was one that could not possibly be duplicated with anyone outside his own family circle.

Avoids Intrusion

Kennedy recognizes that no such relationship would be possible with President Johnson. He seems to have meticulously avoided any intrusion into the decision-making process unless specifically asked for an opinion by Johnson.

The attorney general clearly goes along with the proposition that the President — and he alone — will choose his running mate at the convention in Atlantic City, N.J., next August.

Under these circumstances, Kennedy's course is to wait and see.

A more attractive alternative might direct Kennedy back to Massachusetts to practice law in preparation for a bid to become governor in his home state if he is re-elected this year. Democratic Gov. Endicott Peabody might be willing to get out of Kennedy's way in 1966.

"We've found candy bars, ice cream bars, dead birds, bottles and letters to Santa," Sumnitch said. "One carrier even took a live cat out of one."

The postmaster said when it is known who is responsible for putting these objects in the deposit boxes, a conference is called with the child's parents.

Box Removed

If the problem becomes too serious, the postal department removes the box. If this leads to complaints, there may be some hope of catching the culprit, Sumnitch said.

"When we place a box back on a corner, residents of the area around it know if they don't keep an eye on the mailbox, they will lose it," he said.

He said wallets, which apparently have been stolen, often are dropped into mailboxes after money has been removed. An effort usually is made to contact the owner, Sumnitch said.

The fact that everyone uses the postal service can be a powerful persuader, the postmaster said.

'Not Much Trouble'

"If the persons who put things in mailboxes realize they might damage mail, and that someone might some day do the same thing to them, they probably would not put anything but mail in mailboxes," he said.

Despite the items found in Appleton mailboxes, Sumnitch said there is "not too much trouble here."

"The problem is quite serious in other places," he said, "but that is not the case with Appleton."

He said maximum penalty for placing foreign objects in mailboxes is $2,000 and five years in prison.

Anyone for Fishing?

Three Veteran Bus Drivers Retire After Serving Fox Cities 40 Years

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Developing reputations as dependable bus drivers and an appreciation for the relaxation of fishing may be the success formula for three veteran Fox Cities drivers.

With approximately 120 years of service among them, all three are on the threshold of retirement. One already is semi-retired. All drive for Fox River Bus Lines, Inc.

Lawrence Guthu, 130 N. Badger Ave., Appleton, drives only part-time on an in-city route. His experience dates back to 1923 when he was a street car operator. He hit retirement age first.

Eric Peotter, 402 E. Spring St., Appleton, and George Martin, route 1, Menasha, are commuting down the "home stretch" together. Both will reach retirement eligibility soon. They currently share the interurban run between Neenah and Appleton.

Began in 1924

Peotter's bus driving experience began 40 years ago. In April, 1924, he has taught many others bus operation since then. Martin began in 1925 as a driver; Guthu, in 1929, after about five years on street cars.

Though his regular job kept him in-city on Appleton street cars, Guthu often pinch-hit for other operators involving interurban runs. He recalls the double-run to Appleton, took an hour one way. These also were the days of five-cent fares in town, 15 cents from Appleton to Neenah and weekly passes for $1 or $1.25 depending upon which interurban run was involved.

A bus driver in those early years after street cars began to drop out of the picture could have used an extra arm or two. The street cars, with inflexible routes and other drawbacks, were comparatively easy to operate. With electric heat they were plenty warm in winter, seldom bothered by frosted windows. Buses, though they could be routed most anywhere a passenger demand required, were no picnic in cold weather.

Manifold Heaters

Manifold heaters, no defrost blowers, mechanical brakes and door operation and other mechanical weaknesses made bus driving in the winter a demanding skill. With one hand on the wheel and a glycerin soaked or salt bag in the other to keep frosted windows clear enough for safe visibility took some neat doing, Guthu recalls. Later bus models were improved. The innovation of hydraulic brakes was one of the biggest forward steps, he says.

All three men recall the "golden years" for bus passenger volume during World War II when capacity loads were the rule rather than the exception. About 10 years ago increased car usage became apparent in reduced bus volume, but many workers today still commute to their jobs via bus for economy or to avoid parking problems. Student use of buses still represents a large proportion of the passenger volume, particularly when schools are closed, says George Martin.

Noticeable Departure

The most noticeable departure from familiar faces among their passengers is when there's a convention in Appleton. Out-of-town groups desiring to see more of the Fox Cities during huls between conference sessions transform the interurban vehicles into "tour buses" by Mrs. Lillian Jost, 641 Chestnut St., Neenah.

Mrs. Shirley B. Furman, 514 1/2 Broad St., Menasha, injured in a car-train collision on Badger Avenue in Appleton Thursday afternoon, was reported to be showing improvement at the hospital.

Two other persons injured in the same accident were reported to be slowly improving. They were Mrs. Eunice Vandenberg, 761 Congress St., Neenah, and Mrs. Shirley B. Furman, 514 1/2 Broad St., Menasha, injured in a car-train collision on Badger Avenue in Appleton Thursday afternoon, was reported to be showing improvement at the hospital.

Ohio Governor Won't Be Keynote in State

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes said Friday night he had declined an invitation to deliver his keynote address at the Wisconsin Republican state convention, thing else."

Enjoys Baseball

Once an avid fan of the Appleton Papermakers, he also has enjoyed a number of Fox Cities Foxes games and has taken in Braves home games at Milwaukee. He enjoys travel and "would do more of it — out West — if I could afford it," he says. But last week he procured an angler's license, sort of just in case.

Peotter and Martin are confirmed fishermen with Peotter enjoying several kinds of fishing — ice, boat or stream. Martin, on the other hand, has a good reason for being partial to Lake Winnebago angling. After all, his "retirement" home overlooks the north end of Big Windy just off Fire Lane 10 toward Cliff. What's more, Mrs. Martin enjoys boat fishing too so it's easy to see what they're looking forward to.

With 40 years each in getting others where they want to go, it would seem all three are entitled to their choice of which director they're most oriented to in the years just ahead.

Sales Staff Increased

Appleton Paper Firm Names Two To Department

Two salesmen have been added to the staff of Appleton Coated Paper Co. recently it was announced by Paul Trueschell, sales manager.

Wegner Sullivan They are Charles W. Wegner and Daniel L. Sullivan.

Wegner, a chemical technology graduate of Iowa State University, will work exclusively in the specialty paper field. He has been with Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co. the past 10 years. His experience includes research and chemical sales. He spent two years in development work with Union Carbide Co.

Wegner resides in Appleton with his wife and four children. Sullivan transferred to sales from the traffic department. He is a graduate of St. Norbert College, since 1954. He began in the fishing department and spent eight years in the traffic department. After training he will be assigned the southeastern sales territory.

Sullivan and his family, with two children, also live in Appleton.

Effect of the increase—averaging about 13.1 per cent — will, for example, make the local area delivery of a six-pound parcel cost 37 cents instead of 32 cents. Six pounds is an average parcel weight.

New London Vote On School Bond to Be Fourth in Year

Building Program Reduced From $2.9 Million to $1.4 Million

BY JOHN SAWALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEW LONDON—The April 7 referendum asking voters of the New London Unified School District for $1.4 million to construct a high school continues to be a highly debatable issue among the ranks of the district's electors.

This will be the fourth time within a year voters have gone to the polls to cast their vote for or against a school building program in the district.

Just one year ago in the April election voters overwhelmingly rejected a proposed $2.9 million school plan. Following the election a school administrator called the plan "a Cadillac building" and the proposal was scrapped for a second building that carried a price tag of $1.9 million.

Both the first and second proposals called for four-year high schools. The second proposal also was rejected by the electors, June 25, 1963.

One of the main voter objections to the second school plan was not whether or not it would provide an adequate educational plant but why—if nearly $1 million could be cut off the original plan—couldn't it be trimmed further.

Board Changes

Between the second referendum plan and start of plans for a third referendum, four changes were made on the board of education. Newly elected were Gordon Reidenbach and Kenneth Bleck. Following resignations of Vernon Truesdale and Dean Kronwall, Eugene Fuhrmann and Oliver Kloehn were appointed to the board.

With a new board at the helm another approach was taken on school needs and what should be presented to the public. Note was taken of another factor in defeat of the $1.9 million plan. This was the voters' question on the possibility of an addition to the present Washington High School.

This possibility had not been studied before so the board appointed a three-man committee consisting of Henry J. Miles Jr., a local architect, Walter Schoenrock and William Stern, local contractors, to investigate the possibilities of an addition.

The result of the study was on then to build a new school and with an addition the school would still not be adequate for a four-year high school.

With this study completed, the board of education switched to planning a three-year high school that would accommodate 800 students and conversion of Washington High School to a junior high to be used for grades seven, eight and nine. Under the $1.9 million proposal, Washington High also would have been used for a junior high but no remodeling cost estimates were made.

Although the school had retained Stuenkel and Associates, Sheboygan, as architect for the high school, a floor plan was drawn by Miles.

After studying this plan, Stuenkel gave his approval and agreed to use it as a third proposal. He said the design is adequate and that the 100,000 square foot building can be constructed for $1.4 million.

Rossmiller Report

Building program planning was preceded by a survey of school plant needs in the district was conducted by the Cooperative Educational Research Mrs. Robert Woods. They tend the school would be too small and that the $1.9 million plan should be presented to the public.

Mrs. Woods, in a circular distributed throughout the district, said the three-year school would be too small in less than 10 years. She proposed a four-year high school with the Washington High School to be used for who, along with Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, will be on the Thursday afternoon board, however, did not recommend a sixth-grade in junior.

Planning Supervisor

At a recent public meeting at April 10, Workshops will be held at the high school A. L. Buechner, that afternoon.

Dropout Factor

The report projection also does not compensate for dropouts which vary from five to 10 per cent. Unless the New London district is struck by a population explosion within the next 12 years, the planned three-year high school should be large enough. A 100,000 square foot building would provide 165 square feet per student. A figure of 125 square feet per student has been referred to as minimum.

How long the Washington High School would be adequate for a junior high also has been questioned. Excluding the boiler room and auditorium, Washington High School has 63,339 square feet.

Junior high enrollment in 1976 is projected could still be accommodated to minimum standards of per-student space with that total.

Opposition Contends

Opposition to a three-year high school has been led by Mr. O. W. Capener and Mrs. O. W. Capener and Mrs. Robert Woods. They contend the school would be too small and that the $1.9 million plan should be presented to the public.

Mrs. Woods, in a circular distributed throughout the district, said the three-year school would be too small in less than 10 years. She proposed a four-year high school with the Washington High School to be used for who, along with Gov. George Romney of Michigan will be represented by his wife, along with Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, will be on the Thursday afternoon board, however, did not recommend a sixth-grade in junior.

Setting a Precedent

Egg-Less Easter Egg Hunt Delayed by Snow

In New London it takes more than skill to find the eggs in the annual Easter egg hunt. It takes imagination.

Sponsors of the second annual Easter egg hunt which was to have been held today (but isn't due to the snow) made a precedent-setting decision the other day when they decided to eliminate eggs from the hunt.

This year, although they are officially being called "Easter eggs" hunters will be seeking colored beer coasters.

'More Safe'

"We had some unfavorable experiences with eggs last year," an official said. "We thought we'd switch to something more safe."

"Something more safe" is a round cardboard coaster hand-painted in bright colors with a number glued on the face of it. The cardboard is trimmed a bit to resemble the outline of an old-fashioned egg.

Had not Mother Nature protested the switch and dumped a dismal pile of snow on the hunting ground, youngsters this year would have searched throughout the community for the colored discs. When found, the discs would have been given to judges for prizes.

Last year, when the Easter egg hunt was in its trial run, the sponsors decided on authenticity and asked that students in the high school home economics class prepare several hundred eggs.

Some of the students were better cooks than others, and some of the eggs didn't get completely cooked. It didn't take long to find out.

"The kids put them in paper bags when they found them," a Jaycee sponsor said. "The uncooked ones right in with the cooked ones. Some of the uncooked ones broke and ran all over the others. There were a lot of kids who lost prizes because their eggs broke."

Dises Still Usuable

One official said the kids didn't mind so much, "but one or two kids put the uncooked eggs in their mothers' handbags. It wasn't very pretty."

The cardboard eggs have been readied and painted and were to be hidden throughout the area come Easter morning. But this week, snow breeched the hunt and sponsors have decided the cardboard eggs can be put aside for one more week and still be usable.

"That's another advantage of having the cardboard eggs," one official said. "Can you

Friendship With Books Begins at Tender Age

BY JUDY RUSSELL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — The Children's Department of the Oshkosh Public Library bears a resemblance to a nursery school on Tuesday mornings, only it's a lot quieter.

Tuesday is the day on which "Storybook Time" is held between 10:30 and 11 a.m. for four and five year olds. There may be as many as 40 or 50 pre-school youngsters around but you can hear a pin drop when the "stories" begin. Each week one of the mothers of a youngster attending the session has the honor of reading the four or five children's books selected by Miss Mary Malnar, librarian.

"Between the stories we have finger plays or singing sessions," Miss Malnar explains. The program is unique in that there is no limit on the number of children who can attend and the mothers, not the librarians, read the stories. "We feel that the child is more interested if his mother takes an active part in the program and he doesn't get the idea that the librarians are baby-sitters," Miss Malnar comments.

The children can bring a favorite toy with them to share in the story time and after the stories end they may check out books to take home — some of them go out with an armful of carefully chosen reading material.

While the youngsters attend "Storybook Time" the mothers (and sometimes dads) busy themselves by reading to their smaller children, enjoying the art exhibit in an adjoining room or just by comparing notes in buzz sessions in another part of the children's department.

Some mothers bring half-a-dozen youngsters along, including one or two of their own and others "collected around the neighborhood." Many of the kids rarely miss a story session, while others "come and go."

The program, inaugurated in 1951, begins in mid-October and continues through April. This past week colorful eas-

Asked the reason for the unusual birthday card, Silverman said, "I love my wife, that's all."

Soldier Describes Fighting Unknown Foe in Viet Nam

Lt. Stillman Relates Action On Duty as Helicopter Pilot

BY MARK E. OLIVA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"It's the most difficult kind of war to fight—it's all underground movement—guerrilla warfare—you never know just where you stand."

That's how Lt. Jon Stillman, returned a week ago from Viet Nam's military hotbed, describes the fighting in southeast Asia. Stillman, 26, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Stillman, 218 N. Drew St.

Stillman, an Army helicopter aviator, says holding off the pro-communist Viet Cong is very difficult, because the pro-Western forces never know where the enemy is moving or what it will strike next.

The Viet Nam fighting is not a typical "good guy-bad guy" battle, according to Stillman, because "you never know who the good guys are." The aviator says the opposing forces wear no uniforms, so "almost anyone could be the enemy."

Hard to Fight

Viet Cong forces are very difficult to fight, Stillman said, because they could be anywhere almost any time. They don't use troop movements. "The Viet Cong will load their weapons on a truck and their men, looking like ordinary citizens, may board a regular passenger bus and go to their destination. They'll gather, get their weapons, and the fighting breaks out."

Stillman has been in on the military action himself. His main duty is flying helicopters dropping supplies to Vietnamese forces. U. S. servicemen are working officially only in an advisory capacity in Viet Nam, not fighting, he said.

Stillman says one of his hottest assignments came on what he terms "the biggest heli-borne (via helicopter) combat assaults in history," earlier this year.

Heavy Ground Fire

He said his craft had completed seven or eight lifts and was going onto its last troop lift when a preceding support plane was shot down. Stillman's helicopter was delayed from landing for "a few hours," and when it did land faced "a lot of ground fire."

He said before the Vietnamese troops and a group of U. S. volunteers secured the area, his craft was hit several times, but not damaged seriously, and no one was hurt. An officer went into a slight state of shock, though, when a bullet went through the upper part of his helmet without injuring him. Stillman said.

On another occasion, Stillman's craft had just finished unloading supplies when ground fire broke out in the area. Neither Stillman nor his helicopter was hit.

Last Viet Nam Duty

Stillman considers his time in Viet Nam well-spent. "I'm getting good experience in aviation and as an officer." In the Army for two years, Stillman was sent to Saigon a year ago and now has completed his Vietnamese duty.

He is a graduate of Wayland Academy, Beaver Dam, and the University of Wisconsin, where he received his commission through the ROTC. At the university, he majored in speech, with emphasis on radio and TV directing. He is considering making a career of the Army, possibly earning a master's degree through the army, this time in political science.

His wife doesn't disapprove of having an Army husband at all. Of an Army wife's life, she says, "I'm crazy about it." She says she likes moving around to different places and the encountering people. "They all have the same things in common with us."

After his leave is ended and his stay in Appleton over, Stillman will be transferred to Fort Benning, Ga., and will fly with the 11th Air Assault Command

Spent Life With Students

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FOND DU LAC — River City had its "Music Man" here — Lawrence Skilbred. For years, Skilbred has been responsible for writing, making and sponsoring more music than anyone in the area.

A heart condition forced his retirement as music director of the Fond du Lac public schools a few years ago, but music continues to play a major role in his life.

As secretary of the East Central Wisconsin Music Festival he is in charge of arrangements for festivals here in April and May.

Close Friendships

Music has been Skilbred's life and accounts for close friendship with some well known members of the entertainment world.

Skilbred is known for his love of the classics, but he also shares an appreciation for popular music, too.

Because he has spent most of his life working with high school and college students, Skilbred might well be classified as a "longhair" who is hip.

Skilbred also might claim the title of world's ticket-selling champ. While music director for the schools, he helped promote many musical events, and was so zealous in his ticket-selling as to insure their success.

Born and raised here, Skilbred attended Wisconsin State College — Oshkosh, Ripon College and Chicago Musical College. He received his bachelor and master's degrees in music in 1926 and 1929.

In 1941 at Thorne Hall in Chicago, Skilbred was presented with an honorary doctor of music degree by world famous pianist and friend, Moissaye Boguslawski. The award is given in Illinois to those making outstanding contributions to music.

The Skilbred ensemble used to make periodic trips to Chicago where he has many friends, including Ralph Ginsberg, renowned for his fine chamber music.

Skilbred was honored by the Ripon Chamber of Commerce in 1958 when presented a trophy at a testimonial dinner recognizing his work with musically-inclined youngsters.

He taught school in Illinois and Wisconsin and was a member of the Wisconsin College of Music, Milwaukee, faculty for eight years, and Ripon College eight years, joining the Fond du Lac school system in 1942 and retiring in 1961.

Skilbred recalls the days at Wisconsin State College—Oshkosh when he organized an orchestra and played at weekly student

Used Clothing Collection Set

City Is One of 5 State Sites for Lutheran Program

OSHKOSH — Lutheran Churches of the synodical conference and the National Lutheran Council are gathering wearable used clothing for world relief use and have designated Oshkosh as one of five loading stations in Wisconsin and Upper Michigan from which the clothing will be shipped.

Loading dates will be Monday and Tuesday, April 6 and 7, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Last spring 25,500 pounds of clothing were shipped from Oshkosh for the needy in Europe and Africa.

A great need for clothing still exists in many parts of the world, commented the Rev. Ray Stray of Redeemer Lutheran Church here, co-chairman of Clothing for Lutheran World Relief.

Clothing Needed

Needed are all types of under and outer garments for men, women and children; shoes with closed toes and low heels tied in pairs, and men's work clothing for which there is an extreme need. Also needed are such items as layettes, blankets and bedding.

Anyone wishing to participate in this drive may take the clothing to one of the Lutheran Churches in Oshkosh or directly to the box cars which will be at Cowan Farms F. Brenda, just south of the Main Street Bridge, near the Old Chicago and Northwestern freight depot, during the loading hours.

Thousands to Take Part in Music Event

Fond du Lac Will Be Festival Site April 11, May 9

FOND DU LAC — Thousands of prep musicians and vocalists will converge on this city April 11 and May 9 for the annual East Central Wisconsin Music Festival competition.

Two newcomers to the northern division ranks this year will be Xavier of Appleton and St. Mary of Menasha.

All available public facilities will be taxed on Saturday, April 11 when students from 16 communities participate in the solo and ensemble contests.

Oshkosh Tourney

First place winners in the class A, B and C competition will be invited to participate in the statewide music festival to be held at Oshkosh on Saturday, May 2.

Climaxing the springtime music activity will be concert events for orchestra, hand and chorus—plus the annual festival parade which attracts an estimated 20,000 onlookers each year—on May 9.

St. Mary Springs Academy of Fond du Lac will be host for the festival.

Split Site

The district has expanded so much in recent years that it was necessary for Wisconsin Music Association officials to split it into northern and southern divisions. Hartford will be the scene of musical competition for schools in the other division.

In addition to St. Mary Springs, local schools to participate in the events here include St. Mary Catholic Grade School and Presentation School of North Fond du Lac.

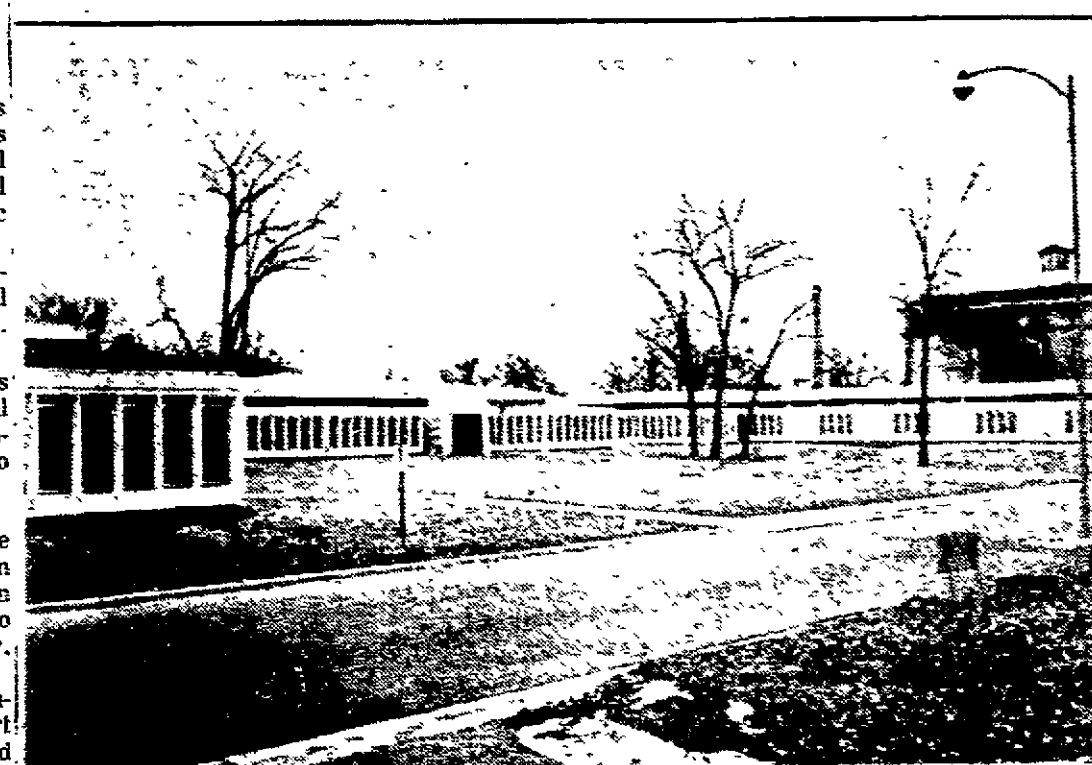

Other participants from throughout the district will include those from Lourdes High of Oshkosh, Berlin High, Brandon, Green Lake, Markesan, Oakfield, Princeton, Ripon Junior and Senior High Schools, Rosendale, Waupun Junior and Senior High Schools, Xavier and Menasha St. Mary.

New Contestants

"We are looking forward to Menasha St. Mary and Appleton Xavier entering our district festival for the first time," commented Lawrence Skilbred, retired Fond du Lac public schools music director, who is

New $3.1 Million Building Finished at State Hospital

Winnebago State Hospital will begin occupancy of its new $3.1 million Gordon Hall, a geriatric-type building, Monday. Construction began in June of 1961 and the state accepted use of the building earlier this month. Grand opening is planned April 26 to launch the Mental Health Week observance. In time the old main building at the rear will be razed with some sections scheduled for razing this year. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Goes Into Operation Monday

WINNEBAGO — Winnebago State Hospital's new Gordon Hall, a $3.1 million geriatric-type building, will take its place in the clinical program at 9 a.m. Monday.

Dr. Charles H. Belcher, superintendent, said the new building grand opening is scheduled Sunday, April 26, to launch the Mental Health Week observance.

He said on Monday nursing services will take over the area, setting up special equipment, preparing the beds, stocking the cabinets and checking to see if everything is in working condition.

Move Patients April 6

From 50 to 60 women patients will be moved from the old main building April 6. All of the patients' personal belongings and clothing will be moved that morning and the noon luncheon will be served in the dining room or on trays.

The actual number of women to be moved will depend on the number in residence in that particular section of the old main building at the time.

Men will be moved from the north wing of the old central building the last week in April and razing of that section will begin May 1.

The remaining patients will be moved from the south wing of the main building, which is equipped to handle a total number of 600 patients, in late September as that section's demolition will begin Oct. 1.

$10 Million Program

The vacating of the main building is part of a $10 million replacement program over a 10-year period. Gordon Hall is the first step in this overall program, Sherman Hall, the second is the fact that residents also will be electing three councilmen and three members to the March 24.

Tentative approval for Gordon Hall was given in August, 1959. On April 3, 1961, plans for the building went to the State Building Commission with a request for funds.

Construction bids were let April 10, 1961. Work began in June, 1961, and construction was completed in the late spring of 1963. Finishing work has held the Common Council for certain up to the final approval of the building by the Bureau of Engineering, State of Wisconsin and the State Hospital Administration. They gave their final approval March 11.

Oshkosh Church Will Mark 3 Anniversaries This Year

115 Years Since Plymouth Congregational Parish Founding

BY ALLAN EKVALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — Plymouth Congregational Church will mark on Sundays and worked in a bank during the week.

Since coming to Oshkosh he has been president of the Evangelical Ministerial Fellowship of Oshkosh and the Central Wisconsin Sunday School Association.

His wife was his childhood sweetheart, growing up in the same neighborhood and attending the same schools. They have two children, Carol Lynne, 14, and Larry, 13.

The Scovils were given a new car by the Congregation last fall.

Mother's Day Sunday of 1959 was the time of the fire which damaged the interior of the church. The church had been struck by lightning during the Found by the Welsh in 1849, the Welsh language was used for the services for close to 40 years. It was dropped in the 1880's with the diminishing of members and the children's lack of familiarity with the Welsh tongue of their parents.

First pastor of the church was the Rev. David Lewis who on Dec. 19, 1849, founded Zion Congregational Church, the first name for this congregation, and two other Welsh churches in the area. Every Saturday he would hike an Indian trail from Neenah to Oshkosh to conduct services among the several Welsh families belonging to the church. Sale of Sunday School books and contributions made up for his lack of a regular salary.

Small Brick Church

Prior to his leaving his parish seven years after its founding the congregation purchases a site at Church Avenue and Franklin Street and erected a small brick church, hailed as one of the finest in Oshkosh.

This site has been used ever since by the congregation which in 1876 replaced the original church with a larger frame structure that seated 225 persons.

Brick from the original church was used for basement walls of the new church. Sunday worship was an all-day affair, especially for farmers whose teams did not provide fast transportation to and from the services.

About the time the present structure was built in 1894 the church changed its name from Zion Congregational Church to Plymouth Congregational Church. During the same period it secured a release from the Wisconsin Welsh Congregational Convention and joined the Winnebago Convention.

The congregation now is affiliated with the Conservative Congregational Christian Conference, formed about 15 years ago, and the Minnesota-Wisconsin Fellowship of Conservative Congregational Churches which on Saturday will have a two-state meeting at Leon, Wis. Additional churches are expected to join the fellowship at this meeting.

Present Pastor

The present pastor, the Rev. Lynn Scovil, is a past vice president of the national organization and currently is on its board of directors and a member of its constitution study committee.

The Rev. Mr. Scovil came here in 1957 after serving a dual charge as pastor of the Congregational churches at Williamsfield and Andover in his native state of Ohio. He was born and educated at Ashtabula, Ohio, where he was ordained April 16, 1950. He attended Milwaukee Bible College and Cleveland Baptist Bible College prior to his ordination. His first parish was a small Methodist Church at Gagefield, Ohio, near Ashtabula, where he preached

Board of Education on April 7 and also deciding whether the legal beer drinking age in the city will be raised to 21.

Council and school board candidates have had to take a back seat as a result of the Gov. Wallace candidacy being centered in and around Oshkosh.

However, Oshkosh citizens will be replacing almost one-third of the Common Council for certain up to the final approval of the building by the Bureau of Engineering, State of Wisconsin and the State Hospital Administration. They gave their final approval March 11.

Beer Drinking Age

Also to be voted upon is a referendum, the results of which will end a year-long controversy. The actual voting will be on an ordinance passed by the council last fall to raise the minimum beer drinking age from 18 to 21 but never put into force.

Thus a "no vote would reject the ordinance and leave the minimum age at 18 and a "yes" vote would put the ordinance into force and raise the age to 21.

Six candidates are seeking the three council seats up for election, two of which are being vacated by councilmen not seeking re-election. A seventh candidate withdrew from the race. Only four candidates came for

Outagamie Society Aims

Cancer Education Group Makes Strong Effort to Discourage Student Smoking

BY JACQUELINE FIX
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

A concerted effort to discourage grade school and high school students from starting to smoke is spearheading the anti-tobacco campaign by the Outagamie County unit of the American Cancer Society this spring. The unit's education program, concentrating on special needs of various groups, is headed by Dr. Paul C. Hodges Jr., Appleton surgeon. The Cancer Society is convinced this spring is being made in programs for grade school and high school students on the problem of smoking. A film strip presenting the problem of cigarette smoking, year for each new group in sixth grade, has been distributed. In April the committee will to all public and parochial grade schools and junior high schools in the county. About 3,000 students already have seen the film, which urges them to make up their own minds on smoking. Cunningham, Appleton, is in

Setting a Precedent

Egg-Less Easter Egg Hunt Delayed by Snow

In New London it takes more than skill to find the eggs in the annual Easter egg hunt. It takes imagination. Sponsors of the second annual Easter egg hunt which was to have been held today (but isn't due to the snow) made a precedent - setting decision the other day when they decided to eliminate eggs from the hunt. This year, although they are officially being called "Easter eggs" hunters will be seeking colored beer coasters. Why?

"More Safe" "We had some unfavorable experiences with eggs last year," an official said. "We thought we'd switch to something more safe."

"Something more safe" is a round cardboard coaster hand-painted in bright colors with a number placed on the face of it. The cardboard is turned a bit to resemble the outline of an old-fashioned egg.

Had not Mother Nature protested the switch and dumped a dismal pile of snow on the hunting ground, youngsters this year would have searched throughout the community for the colored discs. When found, the discs would have been given to judges for prizes.

Last year, when the Easter egg hunt was in its final hour, the sponsors decided on an-thenticity and asked that students in the high school home economics class prepare several hundred eggs.

Some of the students were better cooks than others, and some of the eggs didn't get completely cooked. It didn't take long to find out.

"The kids put them in paper bags when they found them," a Jaycee sponsor said. "The uncooked ones right in with the cooked ones. Some of the uncooked ones broke and ran all over the others. There were a lot of kids who lost prizes because their eggs broke."

Disks Still Usuable One official said the kids didn't mind so much, "but one or two kids put the uncooked eggs in their mothers' handbags. It wasn't very pretty."

The cardboard eggs have been readied and painted and were to be hidden throughout the area come Easter morning. But this week, snow breached the hunt and sponsors have decided the cardboard eggs can be put aside for one more week and still be usable.

"That's another advantage of having the cardboard eggs," one official said. "Can you imagine postponing a real Easter egg hunt for one week, then trying to use the same eggs?"

Almost 8 Per Cent of Chilton Students Smoke Half a Pack Every Day

Tendency Toward Tobacco Use Climbs With Age, Survey Shows

BY DOUG KOPLIEN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

CHILTON — A recent survey at the high school here shows a total of 7.8 per cent of the students in junior and senior high school smoke a half a pack or more of cigarettes per day. The survey conducted at the request of the State Department of Public Instruction, was taken in grades five through 12.

Out of the total of 501 students surveyed 39 smoked more than half a pack per day. When filling out the survey forms students were asked to answer one of five questions. They are: do you smoke. (1) half a pack or more per day; (2) smoke everyday, but less than half a pack; (3) Net every day, but at least one day a week; (4) have tried cigarettes, but do not smoke regularly and (5) have never smoked.

Didn't Try Cigarettes

None of the students in grades five and six indicated even trying cigarettes. Not until the seventh grade did students sample tobacco.

In the seventh grade 50 per cent of the boys and 10 per cent of the girls stated they had tried cigarettes.

In the eighth grade, the trend swung somewhat toward smoking with one per cent of the boys admitted smoking at least one day a week, 69 per cent of them had tried smoking and 30 per cent had never tried. Eighth grade girls indicated half of them tried smoking.

The largest single jump in the percentages was in the eighth grade boys smoking regularly 6.4 per cent in the ninth grade indicated smoking a half a pack or more per day.

Smoked Every Day

Three per cent of the ninth grade boys stated they smoked every day and 4.5 per cent as at least one day per week. Of the others, 41 per cent had tried smoking and 45 per cent had not.

More ninth grade girls than boys admitted smoking at least one day a week. There were 4.9 per cent of the boys and 4.9 per cent of the girls. Another 49 per cent of the girls said they tried smoking and 46 per cent did not.

The sophomore boys smoke 1.8 per cent less than their freshmen counterparts, the survey indicates. Only 4.6 per cent of the sophomores indicated they were smoking a half a pack or more per day as compared to 6.4 per cent of the freshmen.

The remaining sophomore boys are divided, with 67 per cent trying smoking and 23 per cent never having tried cigarettes.

10th Grade Girls

Girls of the 10th grade were even in smoking everyday but less than a half a pack and at least once a week at 6.8 per cent. Thirty-nine per cent said they had tried, 47 per cent had not.

The percentages start to indicate regular smoking more in the junior class with 11.8 per cent of the boys and 8.9 per cent of the girls indicating that life.

A total of 12.5 per cent of the senior boys indicated smoking at least a half a pack per day in comparison to 2.7 per boys and 4.5 per cent of the girls. Smoking every day, 39 per cent of the boys and 39 per cent of the girls smoke at least once a week. Fifty-three per cent of the boys and 49 per cent of the girls indicated they had never smoked.

"Get the Habit" The trend of more smoking was carried on to the senior class. It is here that students really "get the habit." If a teen-ager smokes regularly upon graduation from high school, chances are very good that he or she will continue throughout life.

The trend of more smoking was carried on to the senior class. It is here that students really "get the habit." If a teen-ager smokes regularly upon graduation from high school, chances are very good that he or she will continue throughout life.

Stating they never tried smoking was 22.5 per cent of the class. It is here that students really "get the habit." If a teen-ager smokes regularly upon graduation from high school, chances are very good that he or she will continue throughout life.

Evaluation of the statistics shows an increased trend toward more and more smoking by the students.

Chilton High School is taking steps to curb this trend. Included in the curriculum are lessons pointing out the dangers of smoking and how it injures one physically.

Carlton W. Bolter, 1015 Mt. Vernon St., and Milton Seefeld, 320 N. Eagle St., are both seeking re-election to the Board of Education. Bolter, who is president of the board, is president of Pine-Hirg Machine Co. Seefeld is a funeral director and a former teacher.

Also seeking election to the board are Floyd Hazen, 701 Waugoo Ave., a fireman for the Radford Co., and Stephan Hitchcock, 1333 W. Ninth Ave., an engineer for the Triangle Manufacturing Co.

A third incumbent, Irving Reamer, 1046 Evans St., is not seeking re-election.

Referendum Issue

Spokesmen for both sides in the beer-bar referendum indicated they felt the people of Oshkosh already have made up their minds on how they are going to vote and that extensive campaigning would not have any effect at this point.

A group called the "Oshkosh Citizens Committee" with Herman Kromm, 945 N. Sawyer St., chairman, and Frank M. Hayes Jr., 416 E. Irving Ave., secretary, has been organized to seek a "no" vote in the referendum.

The only active campaigning has been a few car-top carriers by the group urging residents to vote "no."

No formal group has been formed seeking a "yes" vote on the issue.

A total of 12.5 per cent of the senior boys indicated smoking at least a half a pack per day in comparison to 2.7 per boys and 4.5 per cent of the girls. Smoking every day, 39 per cent of the boys and 39 per cent of the girls smoke at least once a week. Fifty-three per cent of the boys and 49 per cent of the girls indicated they had never smoked.

"Get the Habit" The trend of more smoking was carried on to the senior class. It is here that students really "get the habit." If a teen-ager smokes regularly upon graduation from high school, chances are very good that he or she will continue throughout life.

Evaluation of the statistics shows an increased trend toward more and more smoking by the students.

Chilton High School is taking steps to curb this trend. Included in the curriculum are lessons pointing out the dangers of smoking and how it injures one physically.

Evans responded enthusiastically and came here from Sarasota, Fla. He directed the band at a public concert as the band also focused on a spotlight also focused on the opening of the three-ring circus on the main floor of the Goodrich High School gym.

ices there, the congregation used the Community Players Building, a former church at Elmwood Street and Woodland Avenue.

Worship services were resumed in the church basement in October, and a year later a rededication service was held. The outer structure had not been damaged so the congregation voted to stay at the site where it had been located for more than a century.

A third of the auditorium floor was rebuilt, the inside walls were plastered, a new roof added, a large stained glass window damaged by the fire was duplicated and completely new electrical wiring and heating systems were installed. The electronic organ also was reconditioned.

Services include Sunday School and worship in the morning and the Christian Endeavor adult study hour and praise service in the evening on Sundays. A Bible study and prayer meeting is held Thursday nights.

The church has four women's societies, three of which are organized more or less on an age basis. The men's group now is being reorganized. There also are two Christian Endeavor groups.

Fond du Lac has "open dis- trict" competition with both pub- lic and parochial schools partici- pating.

The April and May events will attract thousands of student mu- sicians, and all will get the red carpet treatment from public of- ficials and the Fond du Lac Chamber of Commerce.

No Competition

Students do not compete against each other for ratings. However, the judges rate the in- dividuals and groups separately on their performances in the various classes for solo and en- semble events. First through fifth places are awarded the contestants in each event.

Directors from schools in the district also participate, and the judges are music instructors as- signed to the district festivals by the association.

Mr. B. recalls an old quartet song with these words—

"Saloon, saloon, saloon, how could I forget you so soon

I don't like cafes, and I hate cabarets.
But just mention saloon and my cares fade away.
Now it brings back those fond recollections of a little low-ceilinged room.

Just a bar, and a rail:
A thin dime, and a pail:
Saloon, Saloon, saloon, that old saloon."

Mission Plans Fill Mind of Future Pastor

BY HENRY SIMON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Fox Valley Lutheran High School senior Paul Zittlow plans to become a Lutheran parish pastor, but the FVL student's mind is currently filled with thoughts of mission efforts in Nigeria, Puerto Rico, and Japan.

The Kaukauna senior serves as president of the FVL Future Ministers Club, and this group of pre-theological students is presently preparing an FVL Mission Week for April 5-11 at Lutheran High.

The Mission Week will employ many means to bring the mission message to students. Paul explains. Principal among these is a balsa wood model of the Lutheran Hospital in Eket, Nigeria, which is being painstakingly constructed by FMC members.

Other projects include a display of various mission articles, a mission newspaper, daily chapel sermonettes on missions, and collection of a special offering for missions.

Special Lyceum

Highlighting the week will be a special lyceum. FVL Ministers Club officials Paul and Jerome Stolzman are currently trying to arrange for the Rev. Henry Nitz, Waterloo, to speak at the assembly on the Puerto Rico mission field of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod.

In addition to heading the preparations for Mission Week, Paul, the son of Mrs. Ervin Maves, 205 Brothers, Kaukauna, fills many other extracurricular posts at FVL.

He has been a member of the Lutheran High Student Council for the past three years, and currently is vice-president. He also was an officer of the FMC in his sophomore and junior years, serving first as secretary and then as treasurer.

He has also sung in the tenor section of the St. John Evangelical Lutheran Church Choir, Wrightstown, for four years, and was elected choir president last year.

Paul is an active member of the Young Peoples Society at St. John, and is finding his past experience as treasurer and vice-president useful in his current term as president.

Marker Hunt Prizes

Local historical societies in the state are on a marker hunt at the behest of the Wisconsin State Historical Society which is anxious to complete an inventory of all marked historical locations in the state.

Next Saturday sections of the Wisconsin Council for Local History will gather to compare the early results of their hunts. At Ripon the Winnebago land section of the Council will meet.

The state society has supplied the Council members with its list of its own markers.

In the Winnebago land region the state markers include the sites of the first hydroelectric plant and the first electric street railway at Appleton, the Treaty of the Cedars at Little Chute, the Wisconsin Central Railroad founding at Menasha, the battle of Butte Des Morts in the Town of Menasha, the Poygan paygrounds near Winneconne, Knaggs ferry at Oshkosh, the Upper Fox River at Berlin, the first auto race north of Waupun and the Horicon Marsh east of Waupun.

These markers were raised after careful selection by the state society and are nearly all mounted in locations easily accessible to visiting tourists and other travelers.

However, the state is dotted with monuments and markers of many kinds. Some hold places of considerable prominence in their communities while others are tucked away in obscure places often forgotten by all but the organizations who went out of their way to commemorate what they considered important local happenings.

Finding these out-of-the-way markers is the major aim and prize sought by the state society and its affiliated local organizations.

The Menasha Historical Society and the Banta Foundation marked the site of the historic residences of Menasha above, in Smith Park where Indian mounds are visible. Below is the marker at the grave of Peter Sulp in St. Mary Cemetery. Sulp was a member of Napoleon's Grand Armee before coming to Menasha.

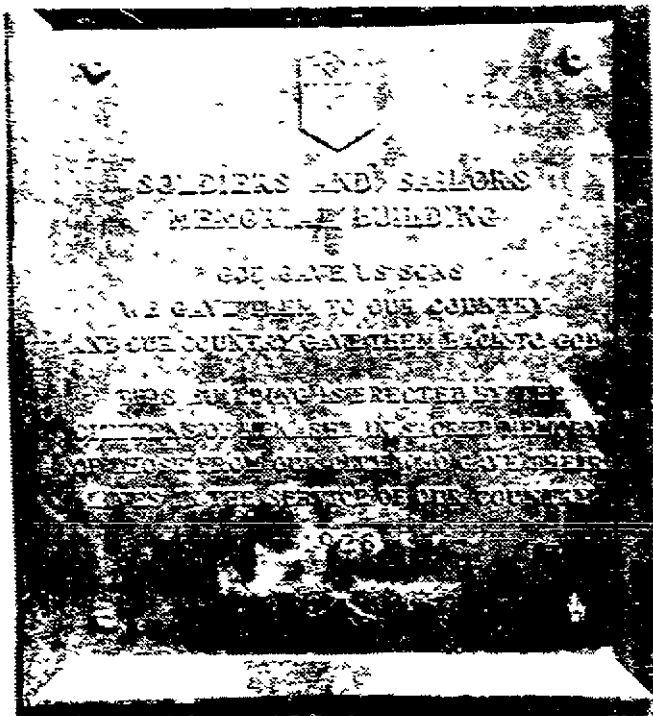

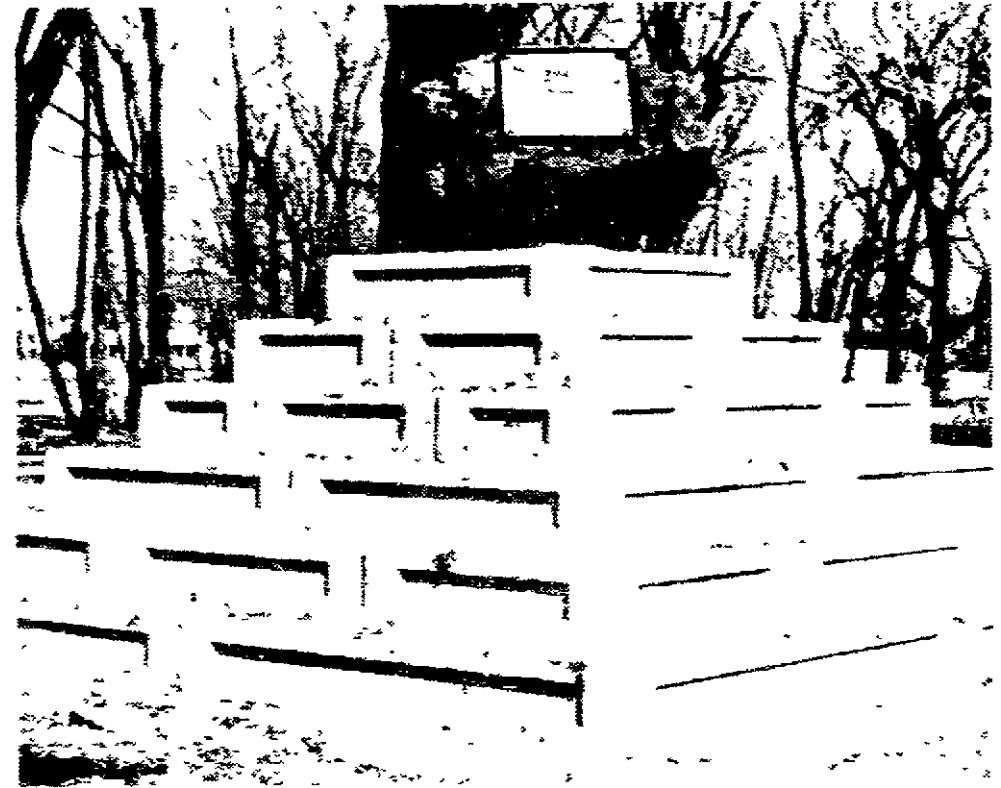

More of a directional help than an historic marker is the sign at Broad and Racine streets pointing to the historic Menasha lock and dam, above. Below, the state's Butte Des Morts marker misses the actual site of the slaughter of the Fox tribe by the French by a mile and a half in the Town of Menasha.

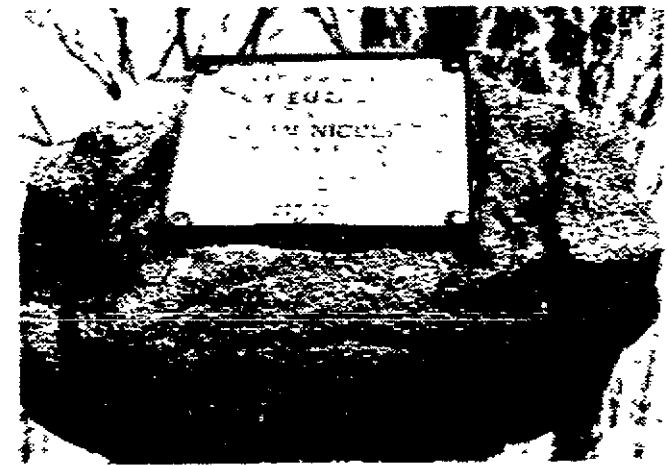

The other state marker in the Menasha area is on the Hotel Menasha at the Mill Main street corner and marks the founding of the Wisconsin Central in Menasha. Below a plaque on the Washington Street bridge notes that the span was dedicated as a memorial to World War veterans, a fact forgotten by most motorists who use the bridge.

Historical Societies Launch State-Wide Marker Hunt

Smith Park, a center for recreation in Menasha, has two other markers. At the left is the Memorial Building with its memorial plaque to the Menasha soldiers and sailors who gave their lives in their country's service. At the right is the impressive Nicolet monument commemorating Jean Nicolet's visit to the Winnebago village on the site of Menasha in 1634 (All Post-Crescent Photos by James W. Auer)

Philharmonic Pays Respects to Easter Observance

New York Philharmonic under the guest baton of George Szell, will pay us musical respects to the Easter observance with a performance of the Prelude and Gold Friday music from Richard Wagner's "Parsifal" on this afternoon's concert.

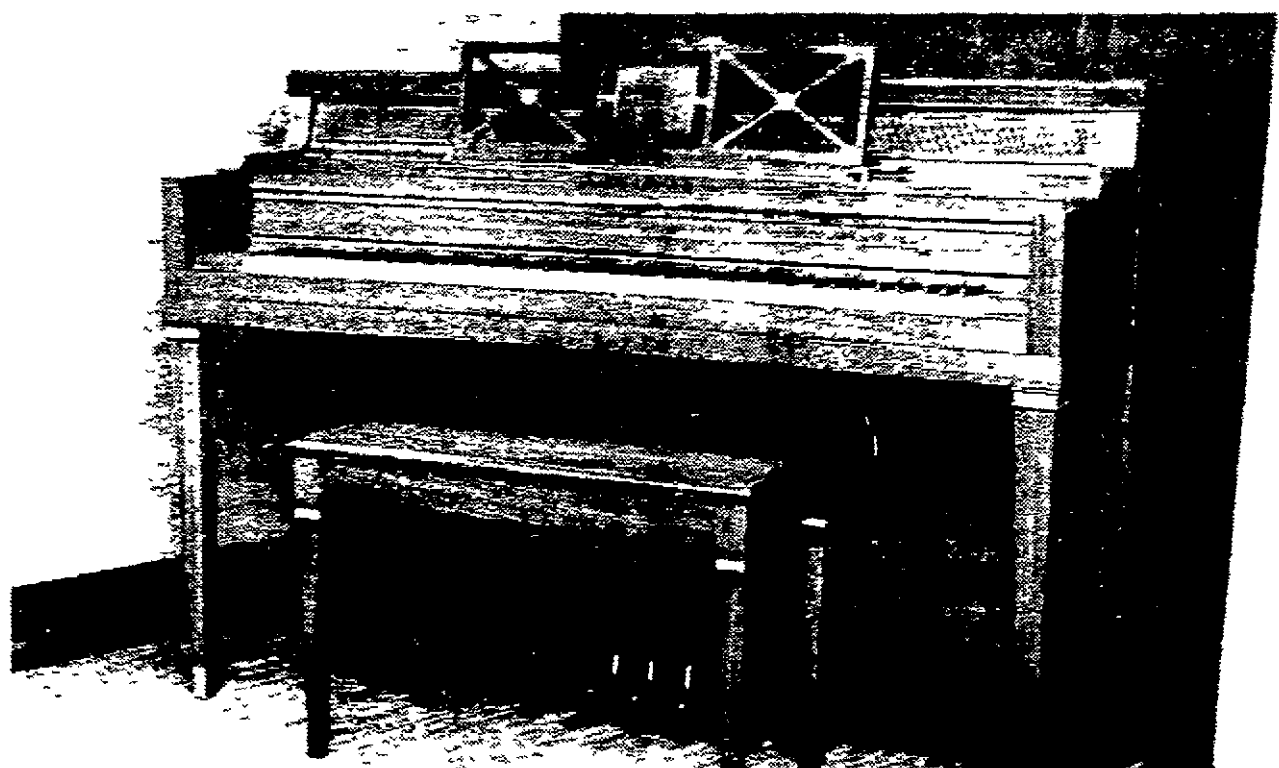

This like each of the 32 Sunday afternoon performances of the 1963-64 season, will be heard exclusively in this area over WAPL radio, 1570, from 2 to 4 p.m.

The Easter afternoon program will be rounded out by Anton Bruckner's Symphony No. 7 in E Major: Allegro moderato; Adagio; Scherzo; and Finale. What critics believe to be the greatest page of his most popular work . . . the "Adagio" of the Seventh Symphony . . . was completed as a lament for Richard Wagner, the news of whose death reached him while he was composing his symphony.

Former 'Queen of Air' Recalls Radio Career

BY JAMES AUER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

"They aren't going to keep me down."

The woman who had once been voted "Beauty Queen of American Radio" flexed her left hand and moved the fingers, one by one. Then she raised her arm until the hand was high above her head.

"See? I can hold it above my head."

She lowered the arm again and began turning the pages of her treasured scrapbook. The pages were brittle now, the clippings faded, the snapshots yellowing with age.

"I wouldn't trade my career for a million dollars," she said.

Slowly she turned the pages, and the visible remnants of an entertainment career spanning nearly four decades, passed in review.

Color Portrait

Her color portrait on the cover of a 1932 Radio Digest magazine . . . Wires from booking agents . . . Hand-illustrated letters from an ardent fan in Kenmare, N. D. . . . A personal note from Sophie Tucker . . . An autographed photo of Lawrence Welk . . . News stories, advertisements, postal cards telling of a career that began with her first music lesson on a summer day in 1916, and will continue as long as her two hands can reach the keys of an electric organ.

Hazel Johnson Behnke was proving once again, as she had so many times since suffering a paralytic stroke in 1962, that her courage as a human being is equaled only by her talent as a singer and instrumentalist.

Her long and distinguished career as an entertainer was capped for Hazel Johnson Behnke (seated) when she was guest of honor at a "This Is Your Life" party. Mrs. Behnke was given an LP record of herself at the organ. Standing from left are Al Ankersson, Appleton; Mrs. Mabel Bauer, Little Chute; Lloyd Romenesko, Kaukauna, and Mrs. Helen Fose, Appleton. (Post-Crescent Photo.)

Mrs. Behnke, who lives with her husband, Jerry, at 319 Naymut St., Menasha, was only eight years old when her father started up his model-T and drove her 18 miles from the family farm to Mott, N. D., for her first piano lesson. It cost 50 cents.

From that time on, she made the trip every week—in the Model-T in summer, when the weather was good, by horse-drawn sled in winter, when snow covered the close-packed sod of North Dakota.

That Hazel was musically minded came as no surprise to the family. Her father, Halvor, formerly of Two Rivers, was an accomplished "fiddler" in the early American tradition, as was her uncle, Ira Johnson. Her mother's sister had achieved some distinction as a classical singer.

Hazel was, however, the first member of her family to become a professional musician.

Accomplished Singer

Soon she had mastered not only the piano but the violin, solovox and pipe organ, and was an accomplished vocalist as well. As Hazel Johnson grew up, so did the infant broadcasting industry, and in 1927—still in her teens—she joined Radio Station KFYZ, Bismarck, N. D., as staff organist.

By 1932, she was conducting three shows, "Tune-ful Moods," "Musical Memories" and "Organ Memories." She became known as the "You-Name-It-I'll-Play-It" girl, and the station had a standing offer to send an autographed photo of their star to anyone who sent in the title of a song she could not play from memory.

In 1932, too, she achieved a triumph that brought national attention to KFYZ's "blonde venus of the keyboard."

Radio Digest, a monthly magazine of the period, was holding a popularity contest for the title of "Beauty Queen of American Radio." Some friends at KFYZ entered Miss Johnson's photo, and when the final vote was tabulated, she had defeated by a substantial margin the two closest finalists, both representatives of major networks.

In token of her triumph, Miss Johnson's portrait was painted by the noted New York artist Charles Sheldon, and was published on the cover of the sponsoring magazine.

Married in 1950

Following her victory in the nation-wide poll, she embarked upon a series of personal appearances, drawing capacity crowds to hotels and theaters from Winnipeg, Manitoba, to Pensacola, Fla. In addition to entertaining as a soloist, she toured as organist with "The Four Shades of Rhythm," an instrumental group.

Wherever she traveled, her black, seven-passenger sedan, with an electric organ in the back seat, became a familiar sight.

Miss Johnson frequently visited Wisconsin, and in 1950 she was married to Jerry Behnke, of Hilbert. She entertained at the Playdium, Sheboygan, for eight years before she and her husband moved to Menasha in 1961.

Mrs. Behnke's skill as an organist won her a job as instructor at the Hammond Organ Studios, Foster Street, Appleton.

Then, a few months after her arrival in the Fox Cities, Mrs. Behnke was struck down by a crippling stroke which paralyzed her left side. She feared her career was over.

But Mrs. Behnke soon recognized these defeatist thoughts as symptoms of the self-pity which, the doctor told her, frequently accompanies a stroke.

And she set about regaining control of her left arm and hand.

"I'm going to play that organ again," she told herself. "It isn't sitting there for nothing."

It was painful at first as she practiced by the hour, moving first one finger and then the others. But she was assisted by the skilled therapists at Theda Clark Memorial hospital.

"It takes your own will power," she commented later. "The good Lord can only do so much for you."

Gradually, with a lot of will power and a lot of tears, she once again achieved mastery of her thumb and fingers.

On the evening of Thursday, March 5, Mrs. Behnke attended what she thought would be a routine meeting of organ students and teachers. Instead, as she sat with the rest of the audience waiting for the program to continue, she heard the master of ceremonies say:

"This is your life, Hazel Behnke!"

The meeting was actually a party in Mrs. Behnke's honor.

"I was never so shocked in my life," she recalls.

In her heyday as a radio entertainer Hazel Johnson Behnke drew hundreds of fan letters, as this 1932 photo testifies.

"I never expected anything like this. I started to cry, and soon everybody in the place was crying."

Her friends presented the former Hazel Johnson with a telegram of congratulations from the management of the Bismarck, N. D. station with which she had so long been associated, a corsage, and a recording of herself playing the organ in 1961, before she became ill.

Now that Mrs. Johnson has recovered from her stroke, she hopes to resume her career as a performer. She has also decided to purchase a sparkling new scrap book, to be placed beside those older scrap books filled with memorabilia of an earlier day.

"I've had 'This Is Your Life,'" she declares. "Now I'm starting a new scrap book for my new life."

Fans Love TV's Penny Baker'

BY CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — The great attraction to women of the television day-time serial—more often called soap opera—has often been explained. Housewives enjoy participating vicariously in the lives of people more or less like themselves.

The idea, of course, is that by dreaming up characters who might be the folks next door living through experiences that might befall anyone, a real sense of identification and gratification is established.

In this context the seven-year-old serial character, "Penny Baker," is typical. In those years of "As the World Turns" Penny, the heroine, has been married three times (twice to the same man), widowed once, has grappled with alcoholism (her husband's), been deserted, suffered amnesia, accused of murder—but exonerated, had a miscarriage.

At the moment she is the bride of a doctor who at one time gave up his profession because he accidentally killed his father in a hunting accident. But he went back in time to save Penny's grandfather's life.

Just because the people who live next door to you or to me aren't enjoying such full accident-prone lives doesn't necessarily mean that they couldn't if they really tried.

'Cry All the Way . . .'

No lowtown marshal ever had as many adventures as Matt Dillon of "Gunsmoke" and no doctor has undergone as many varied experiences—from surgery to threatened malpractice suits—as Dr. Kildare. But kidding soap-opera plots is a favorite and irresistible American sport, particularly by those who rarely watch them.

But the creator, the performers, the sponsors and the network concerned with turning out five weekly half-hour episodes of "As the World Turns" can, in the words of that great contemporary savant, Liberate, cry all the way to bark.

Rosemary Prinz, who has been playing Penny since the birth of the program, says that her afternoon serial is watched daily by a larger audience than those viewing 75 per cent of the prime evening-time programs.

The actress, a pretty blonde, is one of a hardy group of show business' real professionals who, five days a week, year-in and year-out, learn—and forget—a new script a day, and turn in a convincing performance after a short rehearsal.

Miss Prinz, at 33, has an impressive theatrical background. She played summer stock, toured with the national company of "Joan of Lorraine" and had roles in off-Broadway, Broadway, television and radio dramas before she was auditioned for Penny.

A steady seven-year diet of the same thing becomes tiring, so Miss Prinz occasionally is "winded out" of the show for a few weeks at a time. But instead of lounging on some beach, she usually runs off to a summer theatre to play such roles as "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" for a while. Recently, too, she launched a new side-career as a nightclub singer and has cut her record album.

"Acting in a serial like ours presents problems you don't encounter in any other area of show business," she noted. "If you forget your lines on the stage, you can wander around and invent business until you find yourself again. You can't do that in television—you'd move out of the camera's frame and it would be a disaster. In movies, of course, when you go up on your lines, they can shoot the scene again. We can't, our show is live."

Advice to Parents: Teach Children Songs You Loved

BY MARSHALL GRANROS
Of The Post-Crescent

Remember the good old days when we didn't have to be entertained, or told what songs were the nation's favorites?

Back then, on trips in the family auto, what kind of games did your family devise to help pass the time and to keep the youngsters from getting too restless?

We used to count cows. Those on one side counted as points for my sister, those on the other side, for me. Or we counted silos, or horses, or red barns. And we used to sing, sing, sing. It wasn't good, but it was fun. All the old songs and then some we made up. The sillier the better.

Still Effective

Spock-marked parents of today will find that the same games and the same songs work just as well today. Turn off the car radio. Teach the kids some of the songs you loved. To get full measure of enjoyment from folk songs, make it a participation, instead of a spectator sport.

If you have any difficulty remembering enough songs, almost all of the recordings listed will provide a wealth of musical memories or new ditties that the youngsters will get a kick out of singing. The records are intended for the small fry, a folk singer's most demanding audience, and all are presented in a simple, straightforward manner.

Because of the honest approach, too often lacking on many regular releases, these songs glow with love and beauty. In addition, most are bargain-priced and would form the perfect nucleus for a comprehensive folk song library. And if you're lucky, the kids may even let you listen to them once-in-a-while.

A TREASURY OF FOLK SONGS FOR CHILDREN
Elektra, EKL 223

One of the first, and best, of the excellent Elektra treasury series. Basically a two-record sampler of Folk performers on this label. There's a little bit of everything here: Fun Songs, Songs of America, Love and Courting Songs, and Outlaw and Sea Songs. First released over ten years ago, the very fact that it is still available is testimony to its popularity. Standout performances are given by Ed McCurdy, Frank Warner, Jack Elliot and especially by Sandy Paton doing a group of children's street songs from the British Isles.

THE BABY SITTERS, Vanguard VRS-9042

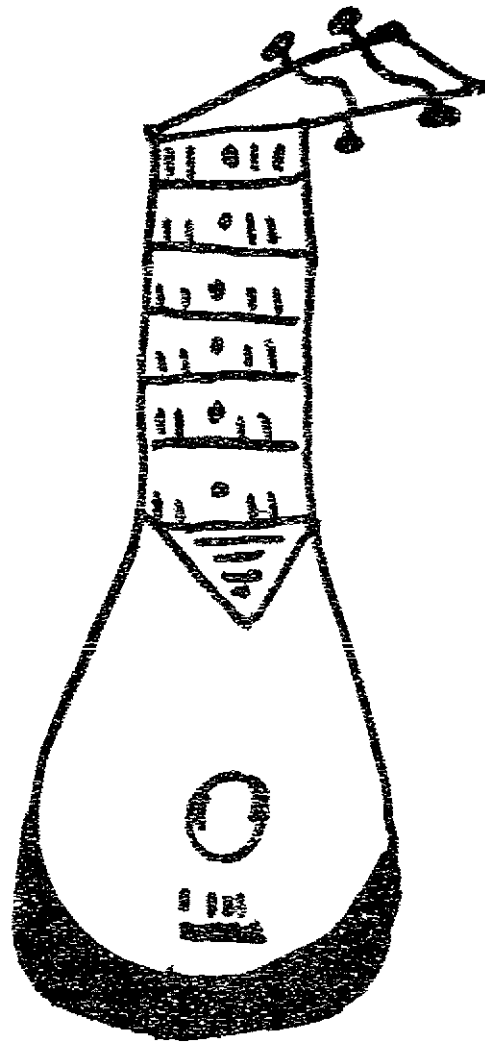

A winning presentation of songs recorded in the homes of The Baby Sitters under the guidance of Professional Uncle Lea Hays, late of the Weavers. It could very easily be subtitled "Folk Music For People Who Hate Folk Music". It is replete with the voices and laughter of two boys, one three years old, the other only a year-and-a-half.

A CHILD'S INTRODUCTION TO FOLK MUSIC, Judson 3436

Lives up to its title, with a simplified, but good explanation of the basics of folk song narrated by

SONGS OF THE WAR BETWEEN THE STATES, Golden Records GLP 50

Subtitled "A Ballad Of The North and South", co-authored, narrated and sung by that genial giant of Folk Song, Win Stracke, this is an excellent collection of Civil War tunes. Both North and South are represented in songs and commentary, including some seldom-recorded numbers.

A MERRY-GO-ROUND OF CHILDREN'S SONGS, Prestige International 13064

Bonnie Dobson, backed up by Walter Raim on banjo, mandolin and guitar, presents a varied and delightful program of songs from the near and far past. The youngsters will love the scary round "Have You Seen The Ghost of John." Five of Woody Guthrie's wonderful children's songs are included.

FOLK SONGS FOR LITTLE COWBOYS, Wonderland 1423

Fifteen songs from the saddlebags of the American cowboy, presented in fine style by Merrick Jarrett, Milt Okun, Paul Clayton, Herb Strauss and Ed McCurdy, among others. Good honest presentation of material that is too often mishandled.

CHILDREN'S SONGS BY ED MCCURDY, Tradition TLP 1027

TOM GLAZER'S SECOND CONCERT FOR CHILDREN, Battle 6691

Recorded in concert, this is a sing-along program for, and with, an extremely young audience. The kids obviously found it great fun, and so will you. Includes Glazer's wonderful parody of On Top of Old Smokey entitled "On Top of Spaghetti".

SONGS AMERICA SINGS, Golden Records GLP 31

Twenty-two songs that touch all areas of our land and give a good idea of how rich and varied our musical heritage really is. Win Stracke does the honors.

SONGS CHILDREN SING: ITALY, Wonderful 1412

The husband-and-wife team of Bob and Louise DeCormier offer songs that have long charmed the children of other cultures, sung in the original language and in English. DeCormier now has his own choral group, which visited Menasha last spring, and he long was Harry Belafonte's musical director. His knowledge of the material gives this series its appealing warmth and simple charm.

CHILDREN'S SONGS OF SHAKESPEARE'S TIME, Counterpoint CPT 549

Madrigals, songs, ayres, instrumental solos (on recorders and virginals), plus six of the most charming rounds ever performed. April 23rd marks the four-hundredth anniversary of the Bard's birth, and this recording by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua is a fine mood-setter for any "brush up your Shakespeare" party you might have planned.

DEAR FOLKS.

When you get ready to defrost your freezer or refrigerator... try using an old quilted mitten (the type used for removing things from your oven or barbecue grill).

It's a knockout!

You can pick up all the ice without freezing your hands.

You will enjoy the job, in-the job will be easier if you use of stain on my hands!

I can mix the dough with my gloves on and slip my hands out of them when necessary.

When it comes time to pound the bread down again, I put my hands back in the rubber gloves. My hands stay clean as they were before I put them in the gooey mixture.

stead of dreading it. Saves broken fingernails, too! Ever try to pry a sliver of caked ice loose and break a fingernail? If you have you will know what I mean!

SCENT OF SACHET

While chatting with my neighbor about our favorite ways of doing laundry, she said she sprinkles sachet on her ironing board before ironing.

I tried it this morning and it's the greatest. Not only the clothes, but the whole room smells sweet. It makes ironing far more pleasant.

TINY DUSTER

I have found that a good two-inch paint brush is the handiest thing to keep in my cleaning box. It is great for picture frames, lamp shades and hard-to-get-at corners. It's extremely easy to wash before using again. I don't know how I ever got along without.

BAKING DAY

For ladies who mix bread...

the job will be easier if you use of stain on my hands!

When it comes time to pound the bread down again, I put my hands back in the rubber gloves. My hands stay clean as they were before I put them in the gooey mixture.

OUTDOOR BLEACH

When I tried to remove the coffee stains from table linens by pouring boiling water on them, it splattered over everything.

I now wash the linens with detergent and lay them on the grass. I then take a tea kettle of boiling water, pour it over the spots and let the cloth dry while still on the grass.

This takes out all the spots and makes the cloth extremely white.

QUICKIE CLEANER

Have you ever tried using an old knitted mitten to clean venetian blinds? Man, it's the greatest! Really "grabs" the dust. A real quick way to do a job without damage to your hands, too.

Throw the mittens in your laundry after each cleaning.

TIME FOR A SHINE

I keep an old pair of socks in my shoeshine box.

When I shine shoes, I just slip the socks over my hands and presto... I don't get a bit

WASH JARS FIRST!

For those who have trouble with face powder spilling in their dresser drawers, try this: I use empty jars such as those that contain garlic salt, onion salt, etc.

By putting the powder in the jars and replacing the plastic cap with the holes in it, one can sprinkle the proper amount of powder needed on the puff.

This is a wonderful way to pack powder in a suitcase, too, because the top can be screwed back on the cap, which prevents spilling.

MORE STARCH, PLEASE

Here's a tip for those with husbands who like extremely stiff collars and cuffs, but insist that shirts be washed and ironed at home. I take an old linen handkerchief, dampened in water, and place it over the collars and cuffs before ironing. This is especially good when using cold starch. It also prevents the iron from sticking to the material.

You might have to pull the handkerchief loose from the material, because it will stick, but it will not scorch. Give the collar and cuffs a final pressing and that's all there is to it.

If you iron the inside of the cuffs and collar first, this will also prevent wrinkles.

PEANUT BAKED BEANS

Here's a suggestion from a "woods-camp" cook:

Add a handful of large peanuts (either raw or roasted) to a pot of baked beans when cooking them, and it will give the beans an entirely different flavor.

If the peanuts are unroasted, soak them thoroughly before baking.

Peanuts give beans a gourmet flavor.

TWO TRICKS

For quick and easy pickled beets... put a can of whole, sliced or diced beets in the juice left from sweet pickles or sliced cucumber pickles. Let these sit in the refrigerator for a few days.

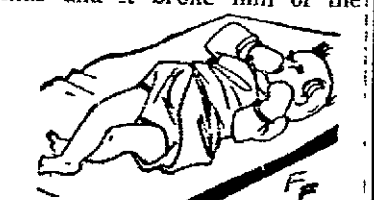

For years I wrestled with toothpick boxes and spilled toothpicks until I finally put them in an old Worcestershire bottle. Besides keeping the toothpicks clean, now I can shake one at a time out of the bottle. This is especially handy on picnics.

TOWEL BARS

For those who live in small homes and lack enough towel space in the bathroom, remove the lower screws from your towel racks and substitute cup hooks. Additional towels and washclothes can be hung on these hooks.

PROBLEM THUMBS

I sewed a white sock onto each sleeve of my baby's pajamas and it broke him of the thumb-sucking he had been doing while asleep.

He may cry one or two nights, but it does work.

Evening Grosbeaks Feed in Area

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Evening grosbeaks are feeding at a number of home feeders in this area according to phone calls and letters I've had recently. The flocks are not as large as they were two and three years ago, but the birds seem to be spread out over most of Northeastern Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Ellithorpe, who live at Idlewild Point in Deer County, wrote that they had about 30 evening grosbeaks at their feeders, some of which came as early as Nov. 8. They are also feeding three pairs of cardinals, many chickadees, some nuthatches and a few jays and woodpeckers. They have seen many snow buntings in their area, and a few goldfinches.

A recent letter from Mrs. Clarence Radtke of Weyauwega informs me that evening grosbeaks, cardinals, juncos, sparrows and nuthatches are daily, or almost daily, visitors at her feeder. She had also seen a pair of purple finches recently.

Feeding Grosbeaks

Several Green Bay residents are feeding evening grosbeaks too, the number in the flocks running from 10 to 30. No doubt the numbers will go higher as the winter progresses.

Viggo Christensen of Suring stopped by recently to tell me that the evening grosbeak had arrived in that area too. Cardinals come to at least one feeder in the Suring area, according to Viggo. Oconto Falls has them too, we found when we took a bird count there recently. This southern bird is moving northward gradually but steadily, and is becoming quite common in some places, including Door County.

At least five persons have told me about hawks which perch in tall trees overlooking home ground feeders. In most cases they were identified as sharp-shinned hawks, known to be killers of small birds. In nature's scheme, that is their place in the wildlife community. We praise the bluebird for eating grubs and other insect life, but condemn the hawk for preying on birds. In all fairness, one is as guilty as the other.

Have you ever seen red crossbills at a feeder? Neither have I, but Mrs. Ralph Koeller in nearby Preble has a pair which has been coming there recently. The male is deep red, she reports, with dark wings and tail, and the female is yellowish-green. This is a rare, but believable record.

Other birds at her feeders are 20 juncos, including one Oregon junco, purple finches, downy, hairy and red-bellied woodpeckers, mourning doves, cardinals, nuthatches, tree sparrows, and chickadees which feed out of her hand. She feeds both mixed bird seed and sunflower seeds, and suet in various types of containers.

MOZART—LAST SIX SYMPHONIES

Symphonies Nos. 35-41; Columbia Symphony, Bruno Walter conducting. Columbia M3L 291 (Stereo M3S 691). Also available as separate discs (ML 5655, 5894/4; MS 6255, 6493/4).

No modern conductor had a greater affinity for the music of Mozart than the late Bruno Walter. It is fitting, therefore, that a significant portion of his final recordings should be an album containing the last six symphonies of Mozart (Nos. 35-41 inclusive; No. 37 has been thrown out because he composed only the introduction), in some of the finest performances in the catalogue.

All are delightful, and each will have a special appeal to someone. My personal favorites are the long and singing, somewhat wistful line of No. 39, especially the slow movement, and the strength and power of No. 41. All display depth of understanding, intense but controlled emotion and surging vitality.

Actually, Nos. 35 and 41 are from a previous release, included here to fill out the album. The rest are all new recordings. Each album of the set is also available separately.

The French Enjoy April Jokes, too

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Take some base material for plaster of paris, mix well with a new type calendar and you just might get "poisson d'avril" an "April fish" or, more idiomatically, an April fool joke.

The year is 1870 and the lid has just been blown off one of the neatest hoaxes ever pulled off on a gullible public. It took some planning, though, and time.

Not as much time as it took the bronze sculptor, who built the Colossus of Rhodes. Erected in 280 B.C., the Colossus (our stamp illustration today) took 12 years. It stood something over 100 feet high and was considered a marvel of the ancient world. Destroyed by an earthquake in 224 B.C., it may well have stood astride a ship entrance in the Grecian port, as the stamp design shows. Some of its history is obscure.

And so it was with the Cardiff Giant, a large, man-like figure which for a while passed as a petrified human being from a by-gone era of giants. When first unearthed in 1869 on the farm of William Newell, near Cardiff, N. Y., it created a sensation. Thousands of curious persons paid admission to see the giant figure. Scientific concern finally led to an examination by a team of physicians.

Hoax Arranged

In February, 1870, the team announced it could not be a petrified human. Further investigation turned up the fact that George Hull, Newell's brother-in-law, had arranged the "burial" quietly several years before so it could be "accidentally" discovered.

Hull had the Giant cut for him in Chicago from a two-ton block of gypsum—the mineral from which plaster of paris is derived.

As for the role of the calendar in our April Fool mix, that would be the Gregorian introduced in 1564 and first adopted by France. Until then, the traditional New Year celebration of about 10 days ended April 1. The tradition of "poissons d'avril" began about the time the new calendar went into use — a light hearted practice possibly inspired by the resultant confusion of dates.

What has the Greek Colossus to do with a hoax giant? To use a hackneyed phrase, you might say "the bigger they come, the harder they fall."

After the earthquake, chunks of the shattered bronze figure at Rhodes lay around for about a thousand years before an enterprising merchant bought

Fox Cities Girl Visits

BY SUSAN BAUERNFEIND

Korea!

I had always hoped to visit the Far East, but never realized that it was within the realm of possibility. In August, 1961, I first learned of the American Red Cross Clubmobile Program. Three months later, 11 of us from various states met in Washington, D. C. for a two-week orientation. It struck me then that I knew very little about Korea. I did have one vivid memory—during a geography exam at Marquette University, I had failed to place Korea correctly on the map for my Korean political science professor.

Our job we learned during those two weeks, was to be a mobile recreation team for the U. S. military, carrying a variety of original activities, games, quizzes, informative narratives and slides to isolated units once a week. We would travel by jeep, three-quarter ton truck, plane, helicopter, train or ox cart,

The author, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Bauernfeind, 516 Manitowoc St. Menasha, is a graduate of St. Mary High School and Marquette University. She spent her junior year at Laval University in Quebec and was an employee of the American National Red Cross from November, 1961, to April, 1962. During that time she was stationed in Korea, and also visited Japan and Hong Kong.

if necessary five days a week, visiting from four to seven units per day.

In addition to our regular Red Cross uniform, we would be issued combat boots, helmets, canteens, gas masks and pistol belts—but no pistols.

By the time we arrived in Japan for the second phase of our orientation program, the primary question was "where would each of us be assigned?" In all there were six units, the most remote being Taegu. We had a joke among us that if we weren't cautious, we'd all be sent to Haegu and never be heard from again. I subsequently was dubbed "Taegu Sue" as the assignments were read that last day. It was a 4-hour trip to Korea by military aircraft, and our first sight of land was one of gray mountains and small villages huddled on every plateau.

Busy Airport

Kimpo International Airport in Seoul buzzed with excitement. Representatives were there from all the Red Cross Units—except Taegu. "The distance, you know," someone explained. But the program director finally did arrive, and we were off for Taegu in an L-20. It just happened that the bullet next to ours was in the process of burning down when we arrived, and in ours, no one had seen any hot water for a week. Since the next day was Sunday, I was given the grand tour of the post after church. I was surprised to find a large PX, swimming pool, tennis courts, service club and craft shop. Taegu, itself, is the third largest city in South Korea. It has excellent tailors, open markets, art shops and restaurants.

I was a bit overwhelmed by the flavor—clanking scissors to announce the selling of wares, roasted peanut stands illuminated by a single candle, sliding doors of intricate design covered with rice paper, babies on backs. It was not unusual to see a 5-year-old carrying a 3-year-old, and men carrying immense loads on jugshees or A-frames which somewhat resembled rucksacks. Some children were barefoot (in December) and all the women, except the very old, wore the gayest of colors. A Korean can wear red and orange or purple and pink together, or all four, and look wonderful.

It wasn't long before I was accustomed to removing my shoes whenever entering a Korean home or shop, sitting on their radiant heated floors, and eating with chopsticks. I even began to appreciate some of their food: kimchi, a hot dish consisting of Chinese cabbage, onions, garlic and red-hot peppers, green tea, sake and dried sea weed.

The Korean language is difficult but it is easy to learn the words "please" and "thank you" in any tongue. With good charades and a small dictionary, we never had any difficulty.

Woman Divers

Meanwhile my work was taking me to Taejeon, northwest, and Pusan, south, in addition to our schedule in Taegu. Pusan was wonderfully warm most of the winter. It is bounded by the Sea of Japan to the east and the Yellow Sea to the west—deep blue water accented by the striking, barren mountains. It was exciting to walk on the wharves where old men with tall horsehair hats and two foot pipes sat on their haunches, discussing the news of the day. And at any moment, one might unexpectedly see the famous woman divers. One day in February, my teammate and I were giving a disc jockey lunch hour program on board a permanent supply ship. It was one of the more bitter days and the water was rough and encrusted with oil.

Suddenly someone shouted: "The divers!" And we rushed to the porthole. There they were, six of them in a small, crudely-constructed wooden boat, huddled around a small stove and covered with blankets. Two of them got up, threw off the blankets, picked up their nets with floaters attached and dove in.

They were diving for sea weed which sells for about 5 cents a pound. As they came closer, I could see they wore swim suits much like ours, and their bodies were well greased. One was young, about 16, the other had a leathery, wrinkled face. They had powerful legs and swam with only the frog kick. They didn't seem to notice the temperature.

Christian Wedding

In March, I was invited to a Korean Christian wedding. I knew that marriages were still often arranged by parents, but I was surprised to learn that this particular bride had not been made aware that she was to be married until a month before the ceremony and did not meet her bridegroom until a week before they became man and wife. The wedding was held in a hall. Where the altar would have been, there was an aquarium. The bride and groom were in Western style, which is becoming more prevalent, but the parents wore Korean dress.

The somber face of the bride disturbed us until we learned that the bride is not to smile on her wedding day or her first-born. It is said will not be a son. After the ceremony, friends entwine streamers around their heads and at the exit, each guest is given a small box containing rice wedding cake. I have since heard that the bride and groom are very happy.

In April, after a two week leave in Japan, I was transferred to the 1st Cavalry Division. This area is north of Seoul, stretching up to the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) where Panmunjom is located. Our Red Cross Unit in the 1st Cavalry is the largest with full staff of 12 and serving 105 military units each week. There we got our share of before-dawn alerts and field servings—taking our programs out to the men on Field Training Exercises. After nine months in the 1st Cavalry, Freedom Bridge, Imjim River, the Spoonbill, the Mamason-Papasan statues and the 105 mm. howitzers became a second language.

Though we didn't visit Panmunjom as part of our duties, we did manage to get passes occasionally into she must leave. The residents pay no taxes, are not subject to military service, own greater amounts of land than most Korean farmers, have two U. S. government supported schoolteachers and are not allowed to leave the village except under U. S. military escort.

The rice had been harvested the day I was there and all were busy with the threshing. Though their land borders directly on North Korea, it was notably peaceful. The people live much as their Korean brethren, but are more complacent. They seem to be satisfied with the old habits and customs and not particularly anxious for modernization. Although electricity had been installed, watermelons were hung on the power lines and the power had ceased to function. On the hill stands the city hall, beautifully constructed of red brick, but it is rarely used. Easily seen from North Korea the community is meant to represent a prosperous village of freedom. There is a similar village in North Korea.

Stone Images

Another such excursion took me to the famed Mamason-Papasan statues. These stone images measure 17.4 meters in height and are more than 1000 years old. Legend has it that a king, seeing two Buddhist monks in a dream, had it carved and afterwards was blessed with a son. It has now become a national shrine for childless couples.

One typical dusty, hot summer day, I chanced to see a funeral procession going by. I could hear the continuous chanting far off. The entourage consisting of the colorfully arrayed catafalque was borne by a large number of men followed by the chief mourner, relatives, friends and professional mourners. Swaying from side to side they made their way up the mountain where the burial would take place. A Korean funeral calls for several death feasts and many gifts to the family. It is not a time of great sadness if the deceased is an older person and has many children because of the belief that the departed is now an ancestral spirit and has become immortal through the living members of the family. The procession is often accompanied by much sake drinking and smoking sometimes offered by passersby. The immediate family dresses in coarse white hemp cloth worn with straw sandals and belts. Because of the expense involved, the Korean government has attempted to discourage these elaborate funerals, but they are still frequently seen in the smaller villages.

When time would allow it, we made the trip to the Korean capital Seoul. A bustling city of 2,000,000 it is the center of government and abounds in parks, good restaurants, Western and Oriental style hotels. Many of the colleges and universities are situated on wide campuses. Leaving the wide avenues of banks, importers and shops, the traveler wanders off to the exciting side streets to find a day-and-night contrast.

Once again one finds the clanking scissors, peanut stands and narrow alleyways.

Seoul ever has a cable car, taking visitors to the top of Namsan Hill, from which one can see a panoramic view of Seoul.

Palaces dating from the 12th century are open to visitors and one can freely wander about the gardens. Anyone who wishes to witness the ancient dances and hear traditional music may go to the Korean House, an organization dedicated to the furthering of United States-Korean understanding.

Menasha Hero

In January of 1963 I was transferred to Uncom-Lu, to Camp Red Cloud. At this camp there is a rifle range dedicated to Eimer Burr of Menasha, who died during World War II. Although I was only in that area for two and one half months, I managed to spend most of my weekends exploring it.

Four of us, including an English speaking Korean, set out one Saturday to climb the mountain of Do-tong south of the camp. After three hours of steep and rocky pains and a short but blinding snow storm we entered a small Buddhist temple. Since the temple is only accessible by foot, the high priest has few visitors and was exceedingly glad to see us. He showed us the various buildings and then invited us to sit with him on the floor of the temple to discuss philosophy. He did most of the talking and through our Korean friend, turned interpreter, we were able to follow what he said. He had an amazing knowledge of all the religions of the world, including those of Western Christianity. As a farewell gift for each of us, he wrote the history of the temple in Chinese on a large piece of rice paper with brush, with a novice monk mixing the ink in ancient fashion. We prom-the DMZ to witness Military Armistice Commission (MAC) meetings. I remember one in particular that lasted 10 minutes. We were not allowed to talk with the Communists, but we freely walked among the North Koreans and Chinese who were observing from outside the Conference building just as we were.

The camp itself is colorless and drab. On a nearby hill, the Communist doves of peace are caged. From there, too, is an expansive view of North Korea and the "Bridge of No Return."

On another day, I received special permission to visit the singular village in the United Nations Command section of the DM, Tae-song Dong or Freedom Village. After the war, these citizens petitioned the UNC to be able to return to their village and permission was granted. The population stands at 200, and no one may move in unless a man marries a girl from another village. If a girl marries outside her village,

Sheinwold on Bridge When an Opponent Opens, It Takes Skill to Respond

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The world is full of bridge players who know just how to bid accurately when one of them opens the bidding. Very few partnerships know how to bid accurately when an opponent opens.

Take your own partnership. Suppose the dealer, at your right, bids one heart. You have a good hand (never mind exactly how good, for the moment), with support for the three unbid suits. So you double, knowing that your partner will understand it is up to him to bid his longest suit.

So far, so good. You and your partner know about takeout doubles, but this isn't the end of the bidding. How does your partner show you whether he is hopeful or terrified?

Suppose your partner bids one spade in response to your takeout double — what is the limit of his strength? What if he jumps to two spades?

How good a hand do you need to bid again if your partner bids only one spade? Remember, you have forced your partner to bid, and he may have a worthless hand.

Graded Responses

When responding to your takeout double your partner should treat his hand as though he were raising your suit. You haven't yet bid a suit, but he knows that yours is the main hand and his is the supporting hand.

Partner counts 1 point extra for a five-card suit; 2 points, for a six-card suit. He also counts 1 point for a doubleton, 3 points for a singleton, and 5 points for a void suit. The distributional values are in addition to his normal count of high-card points: 4 for each ace, 3 for each king, 2 for each queen, 1 for each jack.

Having counted his points, your partner is ready for his response. With 0 to 8 points, he bids a minimum in his longest suit. With 9 to 11 points, he jumps in his best suit. With 12 points or more, he bids the opponent's suit to let you know that your side has a probable game.

The Doubler's Rebid

You can judge how to rebid (if at all) by adding partner's points to your own. When the total is 25 or 26 points (or more), bid game in a major suit. You need 29 or 30 points for game in a minor suit.

You need about 16 or 17 points to rebid if your partner makes a minimum response. With anything less you had better pass for fear that your partner has nothing at all.

When you know that you want to reach game, bid it. Don't keep your partner guessing about the value of the combined holdings.

South can afford to jump to two spades in response to the take-out double of one heart. South has 10 points in high cards, but counts nothing extra for length or shortness.

North has 17 points in high cards and counts 1 point for his doubleton. He adds his 18 points to the values shown by the jump to two spades (9 to 11 points), and sees that the combined count is 27 to 29 points. This is enough for game, so North jumps to four spades.

If North had only 14 or 15 points (A-2 of hearts instead of A-K), he would raise from two spades to three spades, and South would pass.

Shuts East Out

South makes the game by shutting East out of the lead. East would be happy to lead the jack of diamonds through South, and declarer must not allow him to do so.

After winning the opening heart trick in dummy, declarer leads a low spade to finesse with the queen. South hopes to lose this finesse, but his luck is too good.

If South next leads out the ace of spades he is in danger. East may get in with the king of spades in time to lead diamonds and get three diamond tricks. (Actually, South would escape by the skin of his teeth because East would be unable to ruff clubs until the fourth round, when South would get rid of a diamond.)

South's best play is to lead a club to dummy at the third trick and then return another low spade. East follows with the nine of spades, and South plays low. This allows West to win the trick with the ten of spades.

Declarer can lead out his ace of trumps as soon as he regains the lead, thus capturing East's king. He can then run the clubs in safety, discarding a diamond from his hand.

Being 'Good Dog Neighbor' Is Important for Pet and Owner

BY BUD LARIMER

In the Sunday, March 1, edition of the Chicago Tribune, Tom McNally, their sports and dog editor, gave information on how Maryland's Baltimore County Dog License Commission is attempting to fulfill their obligation toward public education as to things Dog, McNally writes:—

"When a person purchases a dog license in Baltimore County he receives, in addition to the license, a pamphlet entitled 'On Being a Good Dog Neighbor.' The pamphlet is printed as a public service by a pet food manufacturer and is provided free to the dog license commission for distribution.

"The pamphlet provides much useful information male dogs 'in heat' are not permitted to be out-of-doors except for the purpose of transporting them for breeding, boarding or treatment and under the immediate control of owner or agent.

"Dogs are not allowed to be at large in Baltimore County unless (a) proven to be obedient and accompanied by the owner (b) used for, or being trained for, hunting and (c) being accompanied by owner on horseback.

"A sworn written complaint against a barking dog or annoying dog may be filed with the Baltimore County License Commission for such action as the members deem necessary.

"Most owners who allow dogs to roam, bark annoyingly, dig up other people's yards, etc., are blind to the fact that their dogs are pests. Most such persons would make corrections if they were aware that their dogs are nuisances. The pamphlet distributed by the Baltimore County License Commission serves as an eye-opener for many people, showing them their darling little Fido may not be considered such a darling by the folks living next door. More such educational pamphlets should be distributed by dog license agencies."

It is in this field of long-range public education and general dissemination of instructive and constructive information on all phases of dog maintenance that all of our local Humane Agencies and Kennel Clubs are falling down badly.

Besides dog care and aids to better public relations on dog problems, a workable rabies inoculation program, use of dog license funds for the betterment of the dog, a spaying program, some form of positive dog identification and, above all, positive and constructive efforts to increase and improve the legal status of the dog and his owner are needed. Too, the general public should be brought to understand that with ownership of a dog go definite responsibilities to and for him. To us, even more cruel than abuse or neglect is the shirking of that real responsibility to your dog shown by those who bring old, eccentric or chronically ailing dogs into kennel or Animal Shelter, dripping Judas tears as they request that "a happy home be found for them."

Worthy as are all of the efforts being made to alleviate abuse, neglect and ignorance concerning dogs, no really appreciable progress will be made until a deep-seated educational program is consistently in operation.

Schools, church groups, fraternal and business groups, Boy and Girl Scouts and 4-H groups are all channels for these programs to achieve success. Without all this, as our society continues to "progress," the status of The Dog and his Owner will continue to be an even sorer one than it is at present.

on dogs. It explains that owners are responsible for the acts of their dogs, gives various do's and don'ts of dog ownership, tips on walking the dog, yard manners, and so on.

"On the back of the pamphlet are some of the regulations governing dogs in Baltimore County. And it seems that many of these could be duplicated by other dog license commissions.

"Some that seem especially unique include Fe-

St. Louis, Mo. — Harry Erdmann, Contour Chair Lounge Wisconsin & Minnesota Distributor with showroom at 501 North Main Street, attended an unusual sales conference here recently.

Instead of sitting on folding chairs at rickety tables in a smoke-filled meeting room, Erdmann and other Contour representatives from 22 major cities relaxed in Contour Chairs for three days.

At this "lie-down" meeting, the most relaxed one ever held here, Contour representatives were introduced to a new method of natural relaxation developed by the Contour Chair Lounge Company.

Arthur Ferro, company executive vice president, played a 20-minute record for the representatives, which teaches a person to relax by relieving tension in the body and mind whenever desired.

He announced that the record would be given away free to all persons over 21 who go to a local Contour Chair store for a demonstration of "natural relaxation."

Erdmann and other representatives heard Dr. Julius Elik, Hungarian-born psychiatrist, discuss the medical and emotional benefits of natural relaxation. Dr. Elik pointed out the adverse effects of an accumulation of everyday stress and tension. Constant emotional strain could indeed affect physical well being, he said.

The record, according to Ferro, "tells you how to relax your body, your breathing, and your mind. Natural relaxation can get rid of the tensions that keep one from relaxing and enjoying needed rest."

Natural relaxation is the absence of tension in the body and mind, and the Contour Method of Relaxation is "a planned program for people who find they are still tired after a night's sleep, people who worry about their health, who are startled by a sudden noise, or those who have a tendency to worry about tomorrow," he added.

Ferro told the representatives that as a result of today's quickening pace, "few Americans know how to relax naturally. Hints and suggestions on how to relax naturally, are contained on the jacket of this free record.

It is possible that some people, after learning the Contour Method of Relaxation, will be able to relax at any time and in any place.

This was proved at the "lie-down" sales conference here. After the record was played the first time, several of the representatives were sound asleep in their comfortable Contour Chair.

Visitors Finds Koreans Hospitable ised ourselves that we would make the climb once again.

Also near Uijom-hu are the Royal Tombs of Kumbok where the 26th and 27th kings of the Yi dynasty (about 1900 A. D.) are buried. The pathway leading to the main temple is flanked on either side by large stone horses, elephants, camels, lions and men.

A group of Korean students were playing a version of our "drop the handkerchief" on an adjoining burial mound (it is customary to have picnics and games at burial sites), so we sat down to watch them. For our benefit the loser of each circuit had to stand and sing a song in English. At this the other students cheered and clapped and broke into gleeful laughter.

Korea is a country rich with opportunity to do, see and learn. The people are smiling and hospitable, the children, like all children, laughing and eager to learn. Though their mode of life may seem a bit aboriginal to us now, it is interesting to note that Korea had a movable metal type printing press 200 years before Gutenberg "invented" it. Admiral Yi Sun-sin in 1592 built the first iron-clad ship in history, and the oldest observatory in the Orient was constructed in Korea in 647.

After centuries of invasions, conquests and occupation, Korea is again beginning to move forward in the hope of becoming a modern nation while yet retaining the best of its traditional culture.

April, 1963, came too quickly for me. When I realized that my departure was at hand, I reflected on the vast number of things I hadn't yet seen and done. I left with the hope of returning one day and not only immediately consoled with my intended trip around the world which would take me in the following eight months to Southeast Asia, India, North Africa and Europe. Now, in retrospect, I can say that although the world seems to be shrinking in this jet era, to me, it kept growing larger and larger with the knowledge that there is never enough time to do justice to any one country.

Visions of St. John Provide Background for TV Oratorio

BY DON ROYAL

NEW YORK—"It was as if I were in another world, in another time. I looked up at the mountain, and I could almost imagine the outline of an acropolis, of a holy city blessed with the temples of Zeus and Athena.

"So as I stood on the Greek island of Patmos, in the Aegean Sea, I thought, yes, this could have influenced the visions of St. John.

"And that, really, is how it all started."

Thus did "Directions '64" producer Wiley Hance recall the dramatic background of the new production of "Revelation," the Easter Oratorio based on the visions of St. John the Divine.

The work, originally presented on ABC-TV's "Directions" in 1962, has been completely restaged and re-orchestrated for showing today at 1 p.m.

"There hasn't been a great deal of contemporary work done on the Easter theme," said Mr. Hance. "So when we starting thinking about production ideas, we honestly could not come up with anything better than 'Revelation.'

"But we didn't want to repeat the '62 telecast; we wanted a fresh approach to the oratorio. And then I remembered my trip to Patmos."

Visited Island

Patmos, the island to which St. John was exiled, for preaching the Christian gospel, was visited by Mr. Hance last summer enroute to Israel and three weeks of filming there.

It occurred to him that John's visions, subsequently recorded in his Book of Revelations, could have been influenced by the prevailing Greek culture and the political prison of his exile.

"When you dream," said Mr. Hance, "you do it within the framework of your own experience.

"Is it so inconceivable that John's conception of God might have been a Zeus-like figure, or that his Archangel might have been a representation of Athena, the goddess of wisdom and virtue?"

"At any rate, that's the assumption we took, and it's the premise on which the new version of the Oratorio is based."

The oratorio itself, blending dance, music, song and unprecedented stage production is adapted from three chapters in the Book of Revelations.

In the "Seal of Wisdom," the first of the ora-torio's three sections, John is told to preach God's wisdom to the world.

Receives Message

He receives this message from the Archangel and later is given a glimpse of the paradise that will be offered to those who believe in the Lord.

Comprising the two final sections are "The 7th Angel" and "The New Day," in which John hears of the Lord's power and then is rewarded with the promise of the new heaven.

"The original production was a monumental offering," declared Mr. Hance, "in that it represented for 'Directions' and for television the first time that anything of such wide creative range had been attempted.

"The staging was ethereal, with unique set designs giving the illusion that the cast was standing in space in mid-air.

"In essence, it was a one-hour slice of heaven filled with angels, archangels and prophets. What we were trying to do was convince the viewer that he was getting his first chance to look in on Paradise.

"Still, I believe that the new work is infinitely more complex and vast in its scope."

Broad Canvas

The broad canvas upon which "Revelation" is drawn, reflects the deft creative talents of designer John Dapper. The sets evoke the atmosphere and rugged terrain of the Aegean islands, with St. John inscribing his visions amid the stark shadows of the barren Patmos.

But the principal set, visible through a huge gauze-like curtain and situated directly behind John, gives the physical feeling of a mountain thrust out of the sea.

It is upon this mountain that the major action takes place. Because it is here that John's visions will be enacted.

"The mountain is like an amphitheater of heaven," said Mr. Hance. "And here too, we are assuming that John's vision of the holy city, at the mountain's pinnacle, would have been translated in terms of Greek culture.

"Our city will be resplendent with color, closely approximating the brilliant, golden effect which typified the marble temples of the ancient Greeks.

As with the '62 telecast, "Directions" again used every inch of space in ABC's Studio 1, the largest in New York.

Cameras were suspended directly above the action and shot into a stage expanse of some 15,000 square feet.

Within this stage, a complement of five operatic soloists, six dancers, a chorus of 20 voices and the ABC symphony orchestra dramatized the spiritual meaning of "Revelation."

The "spiritual meaning" was musically created by composer Earl Wild, a member of the ABC music staff and formerly leading soloist for the late Arturo Toscanini.

With the rare opportunity to improve his original work (the first performance received important critical acclaim), he rescored much of the music and took out what he calls "musical stage waits," orchestral passages that, it was found merely slowed down the action.

Wild's virtuosity is complemented by the libretto of William Lewis, who also sings the role of St. John.

Young Tenor

The young American tenor, who has sung such contrasting roles as Rodolfo in "La Boheme" and Andres in Berg's "Wozzeck" at the Metropolitan Opera, recently sang the tenor lead in "Athaliah," the new opera by Huga Weisgall at the New York Philharmonic Hall.

"Wild and Lewis are, of course, the most prominent figures in the Oratorio," said Mr. Hance. "But we have also assembled a host of other creative talents. They include Nadja Witkowska, a leading soprano of the New York City Opera Company; baritone David Clatworthy of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and choreographer Jeff Duncan, who performed for the City Center and appeared in Broadway hits as "Plain and Fancy," and "Dances Again."

"Just because you're working in the area of religion," declared Mr. Hance, "doesn't mean that can't be entertaining. I believe that if you want to get and keep a large audience for a religious show, you have to use showmanship to kindle and maintain viewer interest."

In that regard, he readily admits that he may be taking dramatic license with his conception of John's visions.

"But we are not tampering in any way with the essential spiritual core of 'Revelation.' If anything, we have attempted to dramatically restate St. John's fervent belief in God."

New Biography Of Shakespeare Richly Detailed

William Shakespeare: a Biography. By A. L. Rowse. Harper & Row. $6.95.

A. L. Rowse, Elizabethan authority, a poet in his own right, has focused his literary efforts on William Shakespeare. Most appropriately so, in this year of the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth.

Using the words of Shakespeare himself, the author has written a chronological biography, relating Shakespeare's writings to the people about him.

The richly detailed background makes a perfect setting for Shakespeare's writings, which are commented upon by Mr. Rowse and from which he draws conclusions and interpretations.

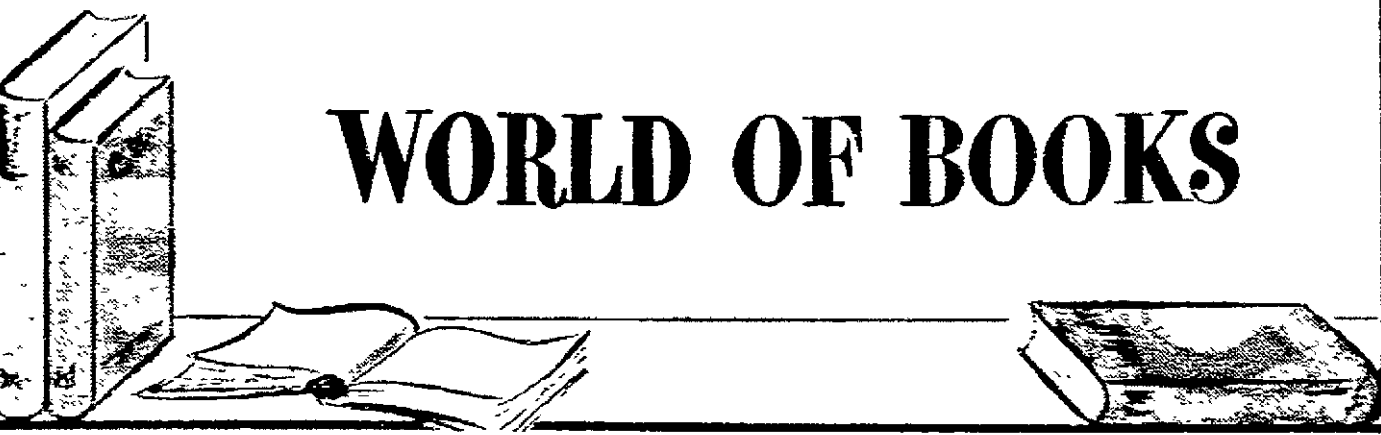

Describes Countryside

The author feels it most propitious that Shakespeare should have been born in Warwickshire during the era of 1564-1616. And he describes the native countryside because it played such a prominent part in Shakespeare's works.

We follow Shakespeare's early years and schooling until one fone day "he took the road to London." The author indulges in a bit of supposition as to what Shakespeare probably did in those first years, and summarizes some of the more serious contrasts between Shakespeare and Marlow, the writer to whom he owed so much in inspiration and challenge.

"In these years Shakespeare found a patron, a friend, and, at length, love." But it is in Shakespeare's Sonnets that Mr. Rowse finds true dimension. Firmly he dates them and creates a chronology, drawing from them his own conclusions.

Not every reader will concur with all of Mr. Rowse's interpretations, but his arguments are well buttressed.

Lives of the Kennedy Women Dramatized in New Volumes

BY C. A. GERMAIN

On St. Patrick's Day the limelight swung again to the woman who has won a special place in the hearts of all Americans, with the announcement that Jacqueline Kennedy would mail 900,000 replies to people who had sent her messages of condolence.

Now in paperback, the lives of Jacqueline and the other Kennedy women are brought close to every home.

Jacqueline Kennedy. By Deane and David Heller. Monarch. 75 cents.

Glamor and youth entered the White House with Jacqueline and John F. Kennedy. This book will take the reader back to happier days and allow them to enjoy again those happier moments in the White House.

First Lady at 31, Mrs. Kennedy captured the imagination of the American public. She became a powerful influence in the thinking and acting of millions of American women, from teen-age girls to great-grandmothers. Her opinions, her hair-styles and dress-styles, every move she made, were publicized by the press and eagerly followed by women everywhere.

Pictures and Text Tell F.D.R.'s Life

F.D.R. By Robert D. Graff & Robert Emmett Ginna. Text by Roger Butterfield. Harper & Row. $10.

"That man in the White House," as Franklin D. Roosevelt was referred to by many people, was the only President of the United States to be elected four times.

In a unique combination of chronological text and pictures, over 400 illustrations selected from 1,000,000 feet of motion picture film and 10,000 feet of still photographs, make a book of unusual historical and visual interest.

Some pictures will be familiar to the reader; others have never been published before. Much of the material is on public record; some of it is new.

Emotional Impact

The pictures were chosen to convey not only the historical record, but some of the emotional impact of the man and his times. Scenes of pickets, the CCC, WPA projects, crowds of people, and the Roosevelt family, succeed in this intent.

There are quotations from Roosevelt, Churchill, Mrs. Roosevelt, and other prominent people. They have been incorporated to enhance the text. Friends and enemies were interviewed and quoted. Mrs. Roosevelt's recollections add a personal touch.

The illustrations are examples of the best in photographic achievement; the text is well written on high quality paper. A complete index will aid the reader to locate specific incidents.

A "must" for permanent libraries and collections on great men.

Shortly after she entered the White House she said, "I think that a wife's happiness comes in what will make her husband happy." This sentiment found an echo in the hearts of wives everywhere.

Story-Book Romance

The book touches on Jacqueline's life as a young girl, her courtship, engagement and story-book romance. Pictures include her wedding, Inauguration Day, Caroline, that day in Texas, and the funeral of President Kennedy.

The authors, who have published more than 2,000 articles and several books, including "John Foster Dulles, Soldier for Peace," compare her with other First Ladies.

Jacqueline Kennedy said, "Whoever lives in the White House must preserve its traditions, enhance it, and leave something of herself there." Perhaps her greatest contribution will be the restoration of the White House, helping to make the Executive Mansion a place of authentic history and inspiration for the millions who visit it each year.

Her aim was to restore, not merely decorate. "The White House should reflect living American History," she said. In an unprecedented TV appearance, she led millions to a new appreciation of their heritage in the White House.

The book concludes with a brief but moving chapter describing that fateful day in Dallas, Mrs. Kennedy's conduct after the assassination, the funeral and her grief. It is a poignant story.

The Magnificent Kennedy Women. By Stanley P. Friedman. Monarch. 75 cents.

Interest in all the Kennedy women has been almost universal as a result of the publicity received by John F. Kennedy and his wife Jacqueline.

In this book, begun a short time before the tragic death of President Kennedy, the author explores the forces that have forged the characters and youthful spirits of the Kennedy women. He includes Kennedy women by birth and by marriage.

Starting with the Irish matriarch of the family, Rose Kennedy, he describes her influence on the family, what has brought her the most joy in life, her pains and trials, her satisfactions and successes.

The daughters, Eunice (Mrs. Sargent Shriver), Pat (Mrs. Peter Lawford), and Jean (Mrs. Stephen Smith) are discussed. The author, a former newspaper man, covers their bringing-up, marriage, children, outside activities and political activities in separate chapters.

He continues with the wives of Robert Kennedy (Ethel) and Ted (Joan) and concludes with Jacqueline. These are interesting, thumb-nail sketches of each woman, filled with anecdotes. Illustrated.

With books like these, the paperbacks have moved out of the realm of the "penny-dreadfuls" into their rightful role of providing conveniently priced reading material. Whether they convey worthwhile reading material or "trash" depends entirely on the purchaser, who has available at his fingertips, some of the world's literary treasures to build an inexpensive library.

Easter

Easter Sunday tells in human terms the tremendous miracle of another spring that we see on every side. For Easter denies victory to the tomb and assures hope of eternal life.

In Wisconsin at this time of year we see the miracle on all sides but often we take it for granted. What is the force that prompts the whistling swan to start his northward journey over thousands of miles in this same pathway every year? Why do the trees stand stark and bare all winter and just now the buds begin to swell to burst? What is the time signal for the tulip shoots to probe upward through the newly thawed earth? Science speaks of enzymes and food needs and temperature changes. But the power and the mind that worked out this intricate miracle is hidden.

And so it is with the story of Easter. The symbols—the eggs, the flowers, the finery—are all symbols of re-birth and new life. But the Easter message itself is that there is no death, not for love and hope and faith. There is the risen Christ and the stone rolled away from the tomb. There is also the repentant thief on the cross and the promise that he, too, would be in paradise.

All the major religions have the promise of resurrection. And even the sceptics every year have spring.

Vote Yes on Highway Referendum

There are a number of judgment factors which properly enter into consideration of the highway bonding referendum Tuesday. The decision is considerably involved with the politics of the state, and there are many pertinent questions which the referendum does not answer.

However, it appears to the Post-Crescent that there is one factor involved which far outweighs the others.

The basic fiscal problem in Wisconsin at the present time is that the increase in the costs of the services the people of this state appear to desire is outdistancing the growth in the state's economy. Therefore the tax requirements on each individual taxpayer are becoming constantly more burdensome.

The most appealing argument in favor of an accelerated highway building program is that it will improve the state's economy. Modern four-lane limited access highways are a necessity for industrial growth. And they should be a considerable advantage in expanding our tourist industry. Metropolitan areas like the Fox Cities are in dire need of expressway and bridge construction as much as is Milwaukee if they are to continue their rapid growth.

A Yes vote on the highway referendum is no absolute guarantee that these benefits will come to pass. But a No vote is a guarantee that they will not come to pass for some time to come.

On this page today is a map prepared by the State Highway Commission showing highway construction which would be speeded up if an additional cent per gallon on the gasoline tax is approved.

The commission says completion of our interstate highways could be advanced by five years; a state freeway network could be developed; and more than $100 million in funds could be released for other urgently needed state highway projects. It adds that the Milwaukee Expressway system would be completed two to three years sooner.

All this would not occur automatically. If the legislature receives a go-ahead in the referendum—and that is all that is involved—it would have to set up a new state building corporation to borrow the money, pledging the new one cent gasoline tax to pay the interest and principal.

Then the Highway Commission would determine what new construction would be undertaken, and we could expect some pulling and hauling on that score.

There might be another beneficial effect. Part of our highway problem in Wisconsin is that we have built one of the best secondary road networks in the country. To do so we have neglected interstates and freeways.

There have been rumblings about changing this emphasis in the future, and a favorable referendum vote could be interpreted by the legislature in favor of spending more highway moneys for state-wide needs.

Taking all of these factors into consideration, the Post-Crescent believes the best interests of the people of Wisconsin will be served by a Yes vote.

The cost is not exorbitant for the results possible. It is estimated the gasoline tax of the average motorist would go up about $7 per year. And the cost would be fairly assessed, on the people who use the highways, including those from out-of-state.

After lengthy consideration, the Post-Crescent recommends a Yes vote on the highway bonding referendum April 7.

Vote Yes on Constitutional Amendments

There are three constitutional amendments on the ballot Wisconsin voters will receive April 7. In addition to the advisory referendum on the highway bonding matter. They are all technical in nature and they have received little attention in the campaigning. Yet favorable action on all three is important.

It should be made clear that action of the voters on these three matters is final and binding. All three have been approved by large, non-partisan margins in two successive sessions of the legislature. Now they are up to the final vote of the people, as required by the state constitution.

Let's take them one at a time:

Shall section 10 of article VIII of the constitution be amended to increase the allowable state tax for forestry purposes from two-thirds to one-fourth of one mill of the taxable property of the state?

The constitution now provides that the state can "appropriate moneys for the purpose of acquiring, preserving and developing the forests of the state, but there shall not be appropriated in any one year an amount to exceed one-fourth of one mill of the taxable property of the state."

The funds provided by this assessment are inadequate to do the job. The present level of state forestry services cannot be maintained under this limitation. The rate has not been changed since it was first enacted 57 years ago. The legislature proposes to raise the rate from 2 mill to 25 mill per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

In other words on a home assessed at $10,000, the taxes would go up 50 cents per year.

The need for the additional funds is critical this year with the continuing drought in our forest areas. Our state forests are one of our most valued possessions. The slight increase necessary in taxes to preserve them is well justified.

The Post-Crescent recommends you vote Yes.

Shall section 3 of article XI of the constitution be amended to allow the basis of valuation of property for debt limit purposes to be computed on the reduction in the tax base when and if certain personal property is entirely eliminated from assessment and taxation?

The personal property tax is generally agreed to be the most onerous form of state taxation. When the selective sales tax was adopted in 1961, the personal property tax was cut in half. There is considerable support for eliminating it completely.

Since the bonding limits of municipalities are set as a percentage of the equalized valuation of both real estate and personal property, however, these limits are reduced by lowering the personal property tax. This could prove disastrous for some municipalities.

The Post-Crescent again recommends a Yes vote.

Shall section 1 of article XII of the constitution be amended to permit the inclusion of several reasonably related items in a single proposition when submitting proposed constitutional amendments to the people?

This is the most technical of the three, and probably the most important for the future of the state. A Commission on Constitutional Revision has been at work since 1960. Certain recommendations for changes in our constitution can be expected in the near future.

Yet at present each such change must be the subject of a separate referendum, even if they are closely related matters.

For example, suppose we wished to consider changing the terms of office of elected state officials from two to four years. There would have to be a separate amendment for each such state officer.

One might pass and another might not. Thus the governor's term could be kept at two years and the lieutenant governor's increased to four.

This amendment would make possible considering such related changes all in one amendment. It is logical and highly desirable.

The Post-Crescent again recommends a Yes vote.

Minors Must Be Protected From Books Like 'Tropic'

Editor, Post-Crescent: I was deeply impressed with the large titles of the faculty members of Lawrence College who so gallantly defended part of the American heritage—the freedom to read.

If their intentions are so proper, where is their positive thinking or constructive criticism?

May I suggest a compromise to the moralists and the "defenders" of the constitutional rights? We don't ban liquor from the state—we do, however, ban selling it to minors—and prosecute adults who aid in the delinquency of minors in this field.

If this country was founded and based on Christian principles, surely it can value the spiritual welfare of its minors at least as highly as their drinking habits.

The large percentage of the Lawrence faculty united on such a controversial subject is most alarming to me. I could get a better argument on this question from first graders,

This Map Prepared by the State Highway Commission shows portions of the Interstate Highway System which would be built earlier under an accelerated highway program, freeway routes which would be considered for multi-lane construction, proposed additions to the Interstate Highways, and highways on which high-priority projects are located which would be built with money released to the state highway fund by acceleration. The triangles show released fund projects located within municipalities.

There's Major Difference in Prohibition, Civil Rights Bill

Editor, Post-Crescent:

In reply to the letter appearing in the People's Forum on Sunday, March 22, written by Mrs. A. P. Nonweiler concerning the Civil Rights Bill, I would like to say a few things.

First, Mrs. Nonweiler expresses an obvious distaste for the open expression of opinion. She accused the students of Oshkosh State College of possessing low mentalities because they did not show passive approval to Gov. Wallace and what he stands for, as the more "intelligent" did. Manners are one thing, Mrs. Nonweiler, passiveness is another. She stated also that Gov. Wallace "did not talk down to the mental level" shown by the students. What about the mental level of Gov. Wallace that he himself has made so obvious? Why should respect be given to a man who is not worthy of respect? How can you respect a man who does not respect humanity? The way a large per cent of the citizens of his own state of Alabama are treated can at the very least be called "discourteous" and "lacking in respect." Is this man worthy of being treated respectfully, courteously, like a man of high principles? I agree, we should not resort to the base tactics of violence and hatred. This would only be descending to his level. But I hardly think it's necessary, as happened in Appleton, to sing "Dixie" for him like a lot of ignorant jackasses.

You compared the Civil Rights Bill to the Prohibition Act of 1919. I think that in drawing the parallel between the two acts it is only fair to include a few of the differences.

To start with, the reasons behind each bill are vastly different. Drinking in itself is not wrong. Only when drinking is excessive, is it immoral. On the other hand, racism and discrimination are always wrong even in their most minute form. It was wrong to outlaw drinking because drinking is not wrong. The same cannot be said of racism.

Yes, the harm done by the Prohibition was far greater than any good it might have accomplished. I don't believe

Our mass opinion seems to have developed on the minds, depending on whom we owe our allegiance or jobs, or more specifically, who asked for their signature.

If the book in question is by a writer of serious purpose, I'd like to know what it takes to qualify.

Does separation of church and state mean higher education and educators who—even off the campus—must oppose anything or anyone who even mentions God or morals, to not be disqualified for federal support. Let's keep things in the proper perspective.

I pray to God that should society, or business, demand this higher book learning—and I emphasize, book learning—from my children, that they not lose the sense of reason, a mind of their own, or just plain common horse sense, which so many intellectuals seem to lack today.

Henry P. Cops

that undesirable repercussions of the Civil Rights Bill can outdo the good it will result in. Is it better to overlook the suffering and oppression of so many of our citizens than to take a little bit of a chance on the bad effects which might result and try to make this country equal to the image she is ever trying to project?

In reference to the "fair employment bill", the Civil Rights Bill only says that fair employment practices will be enforced. It does not say that a company must hire a certain percentage of Negroes or a certain percentage of Jews or any such thing. Such practices originate in business itself. Moreover, the sad part is not so much that such practices exist, as that they are necessary. I don't believe their use will continue indefinitely, but only as long as they are needed; only as long as people neglect to be fair on their own. What do you suggest in this regard? That we continue to nail the Negro down to the bottom rung of the economic ladder, until the nation's employers are struck by heaven into a path of righteousness? This I'm afraid is wishful thinking.

In conclusion, I believe that the Civil Rights Bill is necessary and I'm not just "mouthing words." I've read and listened to every bit of information I've encountered. Weighing all sides, it has become clear to me that the protagonists of the bill are also protagonists of the essence of justice. "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst for justice, for they shall be satisfied." (Matt. 5, 6)

Many Epileptics Lead Normal Lives Today

Editor, Post-Crescent:

This is written with the hopes that any damage caused by the many grossly inaccurate ideas gained from your letter will be corrected; also to give some true facts about epilepsy. As an epileptic myself, with a university education, a friend and acquaintance of many others, and under the care and treatment of some of the best neurologists in the nation, I feel qualified to refute some of the immature remarks and answer several of the questions posed.

The possibility that Jack Ruby is an epileptic is of no concern herein; nor is his guilt or innocence.

Epilepsy, today, should be known by the public for what it is, a disease which afflicts about 1 in 200 people—or about as many people who have diabetes. Intelligent and informed people are aware that epileptics are no different than anyone else.

My wife, not an epileptic, and I are more than pleased with my care and treatment thus far. All other epileptics, along with their families and friends, whom we know express the same sentiments. While it is desirable that there be a positive preventative for epilepsy and/or its seizures, it should be aware that this may be impossible and will take much time and research, if possible, however, the Sabin and Salk vaccines for polio were not developed overnight.

Today, vast research is being conducted for the prevention, control or cure of epilepsy. Fund raising campaigns were carried on in the past year to aid this research. Granted, all the research has not been done; but there is any field in which researchers are still not working? At the present time the federal government is conducting a research project in three of the nations leading neurological hospitals; to receive its aid a person must have epilepsy or be subject to seizures of some sort (seizures are not always caused by epilepsy). The National Epilepsy League, Inc., the United Epilepsy Association and other national organizations contribute research data besides aiding epileptics. An untold amount of information is being gleaned and from it will come, very likely, the "Sabin" for epilepsy.

While I myself, and most other epileptics, live normal lives with the help of medication, how many others are using tranquilizers, sleeping pills, etc., to live their lives normally? The way we live is not "fairly normal," it is the same as any other person and better in many cases. The medications we use are "drugs," however, most prescribed medicines and ordinary remedies which do not require a prescription are also "drugs." The word drug is not reserved specifically for narcotics or other habit-forming compounds. Any epileptic under heavy sedation has been put into that state by his doctor to aid treatment only and will be kept under close observation by him while in that state. Again while some epileptics need special recreation, in all segments of the population there are people restricted from certain activities for medical reasons other than epilepsy.

An epileptic may find it difficult to find employment; this, also, is not limited to epileptics. There are always some people who are never employed for numerous reasons. Unemployment for an epileptic can be due to the prejudice of an employer; this is no different than prejudices against race or creed. An unemployed epileptic does nothing different with his time than any other person in the same circumstances.

Education and its availability is the same for an epileptic as it is for anyone else; it gives you what you put into it. Special aids in education are readily available for those who need and request them. Obtaining financial assistance for education or any other purpose is no different.

Identification for an epileptic can and should be carried in his wallet, shown by a Medic-Alert bracelet or other

Charlie House Will Become Full-Time Member of P-C Staff

BY JOHN TORINUS

I am happy to announce to you readers of the Post-Crescent today that Charlie House will become a full-time employee of this newspaper on April 1.

Mutual agreement was reached with the Green Bay Press-Gazette this week on the new arrangement. It will make possible for us a much wider use of Charlie's versatile talents as a newspaperman.

We haven't specifically outlined Charlie's new duties with us, but instead of being limited to a daily column which in the past had to be general enough to satisfy the needs of both newspapers, he will handle a variety of reporting assignments within our circulation area. This will include features and interpretives for the daily newspaper and a regular feature each Sunday.

Torinus

Charlie is an "old pro" in this newspaper business. After graduating from Colorado State College he went into service in World War II and began his newspaper career working for the camp newspaper at Camp Grant, Ill., later working on Stars and Stripes. When he came out of service he started with the Milwaukee Sentinel and was with that paper for 14 years. There he developed his reputation as a columnist and originated a number of special features such as his "Walk Into Autumn." That annual event will be continued in the Post-Crescent, incidentally.

Charlie left the Sentinel to try his hand at public relations work in Chicago. But after several years he wrote me asking whether there was any opportunity to return to newspaper work in the Fox River Valley. He said he had quickly tired of life in the big city, longed to return to Wisconsin, and that he had always wanted to spend the rest of his life in the Fox River Valley.

In the five years he has been here Charlie has made a host of friends. He has concentrated most of his reporting in the small towns and villages of the area where he now calls many residents by their first names, and vice versa.

Charlie has also become a popular civic club speaker and had fulfilled many engagements in these smaller cities and villages. So much so in fact that a year or so ago we had to severely ration such appearances. Charlie was out speaking almost every night in addition to putting in full time on his writing assignments.

I still shudder when I think of the first "trip assignment" we sent Charlie out on—that canoe trip from Montreal to Wisconsin.

We were trying to figure out an angle for Charlie to cover the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway. He tried to get passage aboard the first ship coming through the new locks, but we found several hundred other newspapermen had the same idea.

Charlie had considerable experience as a canoeist and he suggested he traverse the Seaway by canoe. We checked this out and found the authorities wouldn't operate the locks for boats that small. And the idea of portaging around every lock seemed rather useless.

One night a friend of mine who is quite a student of the early history of this area was telling me about the route the French "courier-de-bois" followed when they traveled from Montreal to the Fox River Valley. Rather than risk the open waters of Lakes Erie, Ontario and Huron, they used a combination of rivers which formed an inland waterway. This was the route Jean Nicolet followed when he became the first white man to penetrate this area.

I was telling Charlie about this when his eyes lit up. "Why not retrace Nicolet's footsteps?" he asked. We were off and running.

It made one of the most fascinating stories ever published in any newspaper, but what we hadn't clearly realized at the time was that Charlie's life was continuously in danger during the whole trip. Traveling all alone in swift perilous rivers and finally out on the open waters of Lake Michigan, Charlie encountered terrible weather, severe storms, angry bears, illness, swarms of insects, cold and hunger. When he finally arrived home he looked like a skeleton.

Sending Charlie out on that trip has been on my conscience ever since.

Rather surprisingly, another exhausting experience came when Charlie had charge of this newspaper's first European trip. He played nursemaid to a party of 80 travelers, and worrying over all of their personal problems for almost a month left Charlie a nervous wreck when he finally got them all home.

Charlie House and his family are going to move to the Fox Cities area, and this in itself will be an asset to our community. His wife Genevieve and their three sons, Jeff, Chuck and John, have all been very active in the community life of DePere where they have lived since coming here. Son Jeff, a sophomore in high school, spent a year in Norway on a personal "foreign exchange" project. Charlie worked out with a family in Norway. A Norwegian girl spent the year, living with the House's.

All of us here are very happy to have Charlie and his family as full-time members of the Post-Crescent family. And I hope all of you will be too.

means. Many people allergic do the same. It is wise to carry such identification where it will be easily seen or found in case of a spell. Very often little help can be given to a person during a seizure. Confusing an epileptic spell with the walk, speech, or fall of an intoxicated person can be easy; both may be similar in outward respects. If people are not well informed about epilepsy, anyone can get information from his doctor, the public library, or any epileptic to name but a few sources.

In summation I should like to say that epileptics are not different; they should not be confused with the mentally ill. Their I.Q.s, religions, races, preferences, etc., are the same as all. In no way can epileptics be generally

Mayor Candidates Discuss Issues

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Mayor Clarence Mitchell, staking his claim to a fourth term on his administration's record, and Ald. George Buckley (14th), pushing for economy in government, are set to square off in the April 7 election.

The victor will take over the reins of Appleton's city government for the next two years, drawing $12,000 this year and $13,000 in 1965.

At present, the mayor's post pays $10,500 a year. A few months ago the common council approved the salary increases to be spread over a two-year period.

Mitchell has been in local government service for the last 14 years, serving as an alderman and county supervisor before defeating Robert Roemer in April of 1953 for the mayor's post. He was unopposed for reelection in 1960. In nailing down his third term in 1962, Mitchell defeated two challengers by a 2,500 vote margin.

Buckley, a former Illinois assistant attorney general and one-term Chicago alderman, came here in 1960 and two years later was successful in gaining a berth on the common council, defeating veteran alderman, Roy Pointer, by a 25-vote margin. In running for the mayor's seat, Buckley will be giving up his position on the council.

The mayoral campaign has been devoid of any issues to date and it is doubtful that any major ones will develop in the next eight days.

Backgrounds

Both candidates are 47 years old and have varied political backgrounds. Mitchell has never lost a local election.

Buckley, an attorney in part-time practice, is president of K.B.W., Inc., Appleton, a Wisconsin corporation engaged in pulp wood sales and real estate developments in northern counties of the state.

As Appleton's Chief executive for the last six years, Mitchell has guided the city through a major expansion period, highlighted by a population explosion throughout the Fox Cities.

Mitchell says Appleton's progress speaks for itself and his administrations.

Buckley has emphasized during his campaigning that it is time for a change.

Below Average

There are about 20,700 Appleton residents registered to vote, slightly below average for a city-wide election year.

Because no real issues have developed, the Post-Crescent asked Mayor Mitchell and Ald. Buckley to supply their answers to the question, "If elected mayor, what would you propose for the good of the city of Appleton the next two years?"

Clarence Mitchell

Here is their reaction: "The most urgent needs that I can see for the city in the next few years are as follows:

- One of the most urgent needs of the city of Appleton at the present time is improving of the water supply for the city.

- The implementation of the Regional Planning Commission recommendations relating to land use, subdivision control ordinances, zoning ordinances, the establishing a quarry of right away for express ways and thoroughfares or putting them on the official maps so as a control of all land as it now exists. Also the encouraging of the neighboring municipalities to establish an official map and also put on their official map the expressways and thoroughfares as recommended by the Regional Planning Commission.

- A continuation of the separation of storm drainage water from the sanitary sewers to eliminate the flooding of basements.

College Avenue

- The planning and reconstruction or rebuilding of College Avenue from east to west so as to provide the downtown Appleton with a new central business area or a new core area.

- The completion of the building of the underground facilities under College Avenue prior to the reconstruction or rebuilding so as to eliminate any costly repairs or cuts in the street that might have to be made after College Avenue has been rebuilt.

- The completion of the extension of W. Washington Street and W. Franklin Street to alleviate the traffic congestion and to give the downtown area and the City of Appleton a better east, west, and northwest traffic flow.

- The relocation and the programming of the intersection of E. Wisconsin Avenue and N. Meade Street. Thereby correcting a congested traffic area and freeing approximately one acre of land so that the adjoining industry can and will expand and employ more people.

Industrial Growth

- To give further aid and assistance to local industry to help it grow and expand so that it can employ more people, thereby giving us a better tax base.

- The continued promotion of the Appleton City Industrial Park by getting new industries or encouraging present industries of the City of Appleton to expand into the Appleton Industrial Park, thereby alleviating some of the congestion in our new industrial areas.

- The future extension of W. College Avenue from U.S. Highway 41 to the new Outagamie County Airport to give access to the City of Appleton for commercial travelers and for industrial users.

- The continuation of providing adequate schools for education for your children, my children, and our grandchildren.

- Continuation of providing adequate recreation facilities such as parks and playgrounds for all the citizens of Appleton regardless of age.

- A continuing review and study of our parking problem and facilities so as to keep it cored as much as possible and not let it lag behind.

Jones Park

- A study or review along with the development of the Jones Park area to which the city now has clear title.

- Supporting the recommendations that have been made for establishing a County Health Department so as to have a county wide health program instead of stopping at political boundaries. I believe we had a very good demonstration of what a county wide program can do on the Sablin Sunday which was held just a short time ago and which will be held again on April 19.

- The reconstruction of N. Badger Avenue from W. Wisconsin Avenue to Memorial Drive and the S. Memorial Drive to W. Lawrence Street to the Memorial Drive Bridge.

If you and I, the citizens of Appleton, as public officials in the City of Appleton think that we can turn our back on any of the above needs that have been mentioned and if by ignoring them they will go away, my advice is that we should not try to do this.

I, therefore, would recommend that the governing body of the

George Buckley

City of Appleton review the first draft of the capital improvement program along with the projected operating expenses for operating budgets along with the predicted tax rates for the years of 1964 to 1970 and that they adopt or accept this as a guide as soon as possible so that all the above projects can be completed and can be financed with a low tax rate as the City of Appleton has been blessed with in the past.

In keeping my reply to approximately 500 words, I cannot go into my entire platform, but will hold that, instead, for the candidates meeting to be held on April 2 at Madison Junior High School.

- I would like to go into my proposal to reduce city expenditures and I firmly believe that this can be done by intelligent, planned spending. There is no excuse for the fact that in just six short years Appleton should be faced with a climbing tax rate, a huge capital debt and no plan for economy in the future. Why are we now floundering in the quicksand of ever-increasing indebtedness?

- One of the prime reasons is the undertaking of too many capital improvements in one tax year. I quote from the Appleton Post-Crescent of Feb. 20, 1964: "Among projects mentioned for bonding are sewers, new municipal garage, fire station, Einstein Junior High, straightening of Meade Street, the Washington-Franklin Street extension and a new high school." All this in just one year. Very obviously, some of these projects are a must, but why should they all be undertaken at once?

Volunteers

- I would like to see a financial advisory committee created with committee members serving on a volunteers basis. I feel that this committee should have as a member our director of finance, an office created, incidentally, subsequent to my resolution of May 16, 1962, calling for the appointment of same. Other members could be one of the past chairmen of our finance committee, two or three men with experience in banking and investments, a representative from each of the Appleton investments, a representative from each of the Appleton investment firms and the mayor.

- This committee could examine closely a list of future proposed capital improvements and determine what effect their undertaking would have on our presently high tax rate. If the undertaking of all of the list would raise the tax rate, then a recommendation to the city council would be made that something would have to be put over for the following year.

- I agree that we will definitely have capital improvement proposals in the future and I agree that we must keep Appleton on the move, but let's not keep our residents and industry on the move out of town to avoid the high tax rate.
- Another reason for the indebtedness is that the tax rate does not make Appleton attractive to new industry nor does it encourage the expansion and retention of our present industry.
- While I am naturally interested in encouraging new industry to locate in Appleton, I am more concerned with the promotion of our present industry, aiding with their zoning problems, and through proper planning — both local and regional — to look to our own industry's future welfare.

Reduce Tax

- But, particularly, I am interested in economy in government that could reduce the tax rate. If that can be accomplished, then our present industry could expand without fear of adding too much to their tax bill, and new industry could be attracted to Appleton.

- The city of La Crosse, comparable in size to Appleton, has had a reduction in its tax rate for three successive years. It can happen here, too.

Assessor Post Attracts First Opposition After 20 Years

When Appleton voters go to the polls April 7, there will be two names on the city assessor ballot for the first time in 20 years.

Veteran Assessor John A. Pierre, 717 E. Frances St., is opposed for the $8,600 a year job by Austin N. Tucker, 324 N. Outagamie St., a service representative for Miller Electric Co.

Pierre was appointed assessor by the common council Oct.

Austin Tucker

1, 1943 and has been one of the top vote-getters in Appleton, running unopposed for 10 consecutive, two-year terms.

In April of 1958, Tucker was elected First Ward alderman by the council, filling a vacancy when Clarence A. Mitchell became mayor. Tucker put in three years on the council, until he was defeated in his bid for a second full term.

In seeking his eleventh term, Pierre carries with him more experience as a municipal assessor than any of his predecessors. His office has about 18,000 pieces of property on the assessment rolls.

A native of Appleton, Pierre attended local schools and was graduated from the Actual Business College of Appleton, majoring in accounting and business administration.

Pierre was one of the operators of a machine works at Kaukauna until he entered military service in World War I. After the war he was associated with a mechanical engineering firm for close to three years, and was appointed safety director for the Appleton High School in 1935.

Four years later Pierre was appointed city building inspector, serving from 1939 until October of 1943 when he became assessor.

A recognized authority on municipal assessment problems, Pierre has appeared on programs sponsored by the League of Wisconsin Municipalities. He also participated in state-sponsored seminars in recent years, and presented a paper on his profession at an international assessors' institute in Philadelphia a few years ago.

Pierre is a member of the International Association of Assessing Officers, and its Wisconsin chapter. He also holds associate memberships in the Society of Residential Appraisers and Appleton Board of Realtors.

In February of 1963 when Building Inspector Walter Bogan retires, Pierre was appointed acting building inspector by the mayor in addition to holding down his assessor's post. He agreed to serve in dual capacity with no increase in salary.

Tucker, a native of Chicago, attended public schools there and at Oak Park, Ill. He also took law and other courses at the John Marshall Evening School.

During World War II, Tucker spent 42 months in the employ of the U. S. Army Engineers as a construction foreman and security inspector for military installations from 1941-45.

From 1941 to 1948 Tucker was an elected justice of the peace and a member of the town board of auditors in the Town of York, Du Page County, Ill.

Tucker estimates he handled more than 4,000 cases in police courts in Elmhurst, Villa Park and Lombard.

He was employed by a steel company in Chicago until 1950 when he came to Wisconsin and resided in Waupaca before coming to Appleton. Tucker has been with Miller Electric for the last 13 years.

Tucker was a comparative newcomer when he was picked for the council post in 1958. Running for his second two-year term as alderman, Tucker was defeated by Roger LaBerge, now city sealer of weights and measures.

Tucker is a member of the Fox Valley section of the American Welding Society.

U.N. Has Failed to Meet Everyone's Expectations

BY MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — French President Charles de Gaulle once called it "the leaning Tower of Babel."

Nikita Khrushchev called it the tool of colonial powers.

A critic in the United States described it as a "Communist-dominated rat nest."

Some Bouquets

These and other brickbats and bouquets have been tossed at the United Nations since the day it came into being 18 years ago.

There have been bouquets too. One of these is Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. Another is Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Goldwater Rap

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., has expressed even stronger reservations. If Red China gets into the U.N., he said recently, "I don't think it would be a safe place for us."

The Soviet Union—despite frequent blasts—continues to maintain, he said recently, "I don't think it would be a safe place for us."

No country has yet quit the United Nations. Each new independent nation has to apply to the San Francisco conference for membership. Even so, most 1945, is outdated and inadequate severe critics insist upon bringing in many respects, but that the problems before it.

Few governments have found sound and workable

It always to their liking. It has been damned by some as an omic, by others as over-ambitious.

Veto Power

Many of its decisions have been killed by the big power veto. Its orders have been defied. More than half its 113 members are delinquent in paying their assessments.

"Our way or no pay," they say in effect.

Influential figures in Congress and in private life have called for a new look at the U.N. position concerning the United Nations.

One of these is Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. Another is Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Goldwater Rap

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., has expressed even stronger reservations. If Red China gets into the U.N., he said recently, "I don't think it would be a safe place for us."

The official U.S. view is set in the U.N. machinery, devised at the San Francisco conference in 1945, is outdated and inadequate severe critics insist upon bringing in many respects, but that the problems before it.

Few governments have found sound and workable

It always to their liking. It has been damned by some as an appointment to its founders as the 11-nation Security Council, entrusted with the major responsibility for maintaining peace.

The council has been in business barely a month when the Soviet Union cast the first of its 101 vetoes.

Favored Veto

All big powers favored the veto—and still do—but the West has been envious of it as a device to be used only in the most extreme circumstances. The Russians used their "veto" so frequently that the council was plunged into virtual paralysis. By 1956 there already had been 43 Soviet vetoes. The only others were two cast by France.

The cold war dealt another serious blow to U.N. peace-keeping plans by thwarting all efforts to establish a big-power military force to be used against aggressors.

The Military Staff Committee, set up in accordance with the charter to create and direct the proposed force, still leads a shadowy existence. It no longer makes even a pretense at trying to implement this charter provision.

Lowest Point

The Security Council sank to its lowest point in the summer of 1950 when Soviet delegate Jakob Malik, as president, tied in a knot for a month as he grappled with the Korean problem.

Most member nations by the fall of 1950 felt that the United Nations would soon meet the fate of the League of Nations unless changes were made swiftly.

The answer was action on two fronts: first, the Western powers decided they would have to by-pass the Security Council; secondly, they turned to regional military alliances, such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, to provide for their own defense.

Regional Agencies

There also was an increased tendency to rely on regional agencies for peaceful settlement of disputes. One example is the Organization of American States, which recently has been dealing with the U.S.-Panama controversy. Another is the Organization of African Unity to which the Ethiopian-Somalian border dispute was recently referred.

The most important development was the shift of the center of gravity from the Security Council to the General Assembly. The foundation for this was the "uniting for peace" resolution, proposed by U.S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson and approved by the assembly in 1950 over Soviet opposition.

The resolution provided that in the event of a veto any seven members of the Security Council might call an emergency session of the assembly within 24 hours.

Boldest Steps

This procedure has been used in a number of important cases and is now accepted by almost all members — except the Soviet bloc.

Perhaps the boldest step taken by the assembly was establishment of the U.N. Emergency Force during the 1956 Suez crisis. This was a revolutionary departure from the concept of the founding fathers. The new force, under U.N. command, was made up of military contingents contributed by small countries. It is still keeping the peace along the border between Israel and the United Arab Republic.

In 1960 the United Nations undertook an even more ambitious military operation when it stepped into the Congo in order to restore order. At one time there were 21,000 U.N. troops in the Congo.

Other Missions

The United Nations has undertaken a score of smaller missions in all parts of the world. These include all types of operations from the one-man "presences" which have been employed in numerous cases, to large military observer groups such as those sent to Lebanon in 1958 and to Yemen last year. One of the oldest groups is the Palestine Truce Observation Organization, in the Holy Land since the armistice of 1949.

Secretary-General U Thant says the United Nations can do nothing if one of the nuclear powers is involved in a breach of peace.

"What the United Nations can do, and should do," he says, "is to prevent brush-fire wars which, of course, have the potentialities of exploding into wider conflagrations and thereby bringing a direct confrontation between the big powers."

India Fights Population With Sterilization Plan

BY CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI (AP)—A million persons have submitted to surgery to cut down India's crop of babies.

This official figure seems impressive, but the government isn't impressed. Its arithmetic shows that a 4.5 per cent annual birth rate minus a death rate of 2.1 per cent equals a net population increase every year of 2.4 per cent.

"It means 10 to 12 million new, hungry mouths to feed every year," says D. S. Raju, deputy health minister. "It means India's population—about 462 million—will reach between 900 million and one billion by the end of the century."

Sterilization

The million milestone was reached last week in the program of voluntary sterilization. "It's not enough," Raju said. "But it's our only hope."

Sterilization is a major part of India's effort to cut its birth rate in half. The government finances operations for any man or woman who has three children and feels economically incapable of supporting more.

"We want to cut the birth rate to 1.5 per cent annually," Raju said. "We must stabilize the population at no more than 700 million. Beyond that, we will not be able to cope with the problem, even if all our measures to improve the economy work."

Population Increase

The problem is that the population is increasing as fast as or faster than national income, and India is eating up its prospects for economic progress.

Hospitals in some areas report that many patients are ill simply because they lack enough to eat.

India is winning significant victories over malaria, smallpox, cholera and other diseases that traditionally cut huge chunks out of the population every few years.

Cut Mortality

Due to improved maternity facilities and widespread instruction in child care, two-thirds of the children born in India live

Hurricane Threat Poses Work Problem at Zoo

MIAMI (AP) — If you have a little sympathy to spare, you can extend it to zoo keepers in hurricane country.

The last time a hurricane threatened Miami, keepers at the Dade County Zoo — located near the beach on an off-shore island — had this to do:

Transfer all the snakes and other reptiles from cages to bags.

Catch all the water birds — ducks, swans, etc. — and put them in the snake cages.

Lug all the mammoth tortoises into the zoo restrooms.

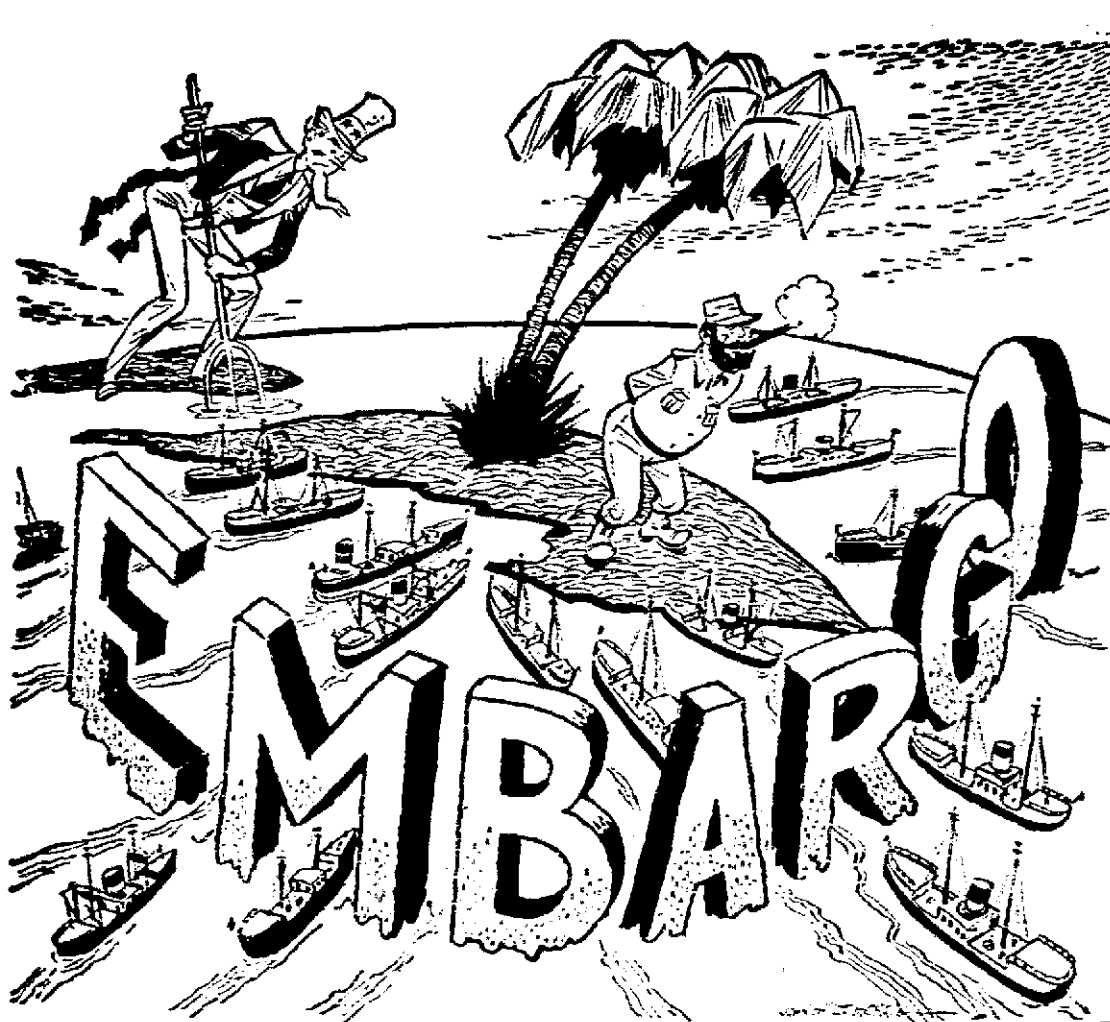

Remove antlers from the deer and crate them.

Give tranquilizers to the ostriches so they could be shifted to shelter without danger to the keepers.

After all that, the hurricane veered away and the precautions turned out to be unnecessary. Much of the 75.3 billion U.S. aid and agriculture to do the job, sary.

It also forbids the use of U.S. ports to all ships of any nation which delivers arms to Cuba.

Shut Off Aid

Under U.S. law, the United States is obliged to shut off aid to nations which trade with Cuba, unless the President decides such an act might injure this nation more than it helps.

As a result, the United States has cut off minute amounts of military aid to Britain, France and Yugoslavia while freezing aid at the current levels to Spain and Morocco for "re-examination of their Cuban trade policies."

Twice in history the United States—or the colonies which became the United States—tried this embargo routine without success, once prior to the American Revolution and once just before the War of 1812.

Bankruptcy

On Dec. 22, 1807, President Thomas Jefferson forbade U.S. vessels to travel to European ports and prohibited foreign ships from loading cargoes in U.S. ports.

The result was near bankruptcy for the sea merchants. Finally, the embargo was modified by President James Madison March 1, 1809, to prohibit trade with just England and France.

By the time the United States got around to repealing this act, the United States and Britain were at war, a war that proved a near disaster for the United States.

Used Blockade

While the United States never has employed the embargo successfully, it has used the blockade with devastating effect.

In the Civil War a tight blockade around the South reduced cotton exports from $200 million in 1861 to $4 million in 1863. By the end of the war in 1865 the Confederacy couldn't even obtain paper to print its money.

After World War II Winston Churchill, in "The Hinge of Fate," wrote: "shipping was at once the stranglehold and sole foundation of our war strategy."

German Subs

The British fought defensively for nearly four years just to keep their lifelines open. Even so the German submarines came close to success, almost as close as in World War I when food supplies in Britain were reduced at one point to a six-week stockpile.

But nothing in the history of blockade equals the devastation inflicted by U.S. submarines on the Japanese Empire in World War II.

Japan began the war with 6 million tons of shipping. It ended the war with less than 2 million tons.

It was unable to bring in support by one bloc or the other.

All Isn't Drab in Cuba, Despite Embargo Effort

The Once-Vaunted Night Life of Havana has been tamed down quite a bit by Castro, but there's still some spark on the scene. This revue at the Havana Riviera indicates that after hours entertainment is not as drab as some say. (AP Wirephoto)

A Bunch of the Boys got out their instruments to beat out a fast tune on a Havana street — and brought their guns along to let everyone know they are still on guard. Fruitless Policy

History Predicts Failure of U. S. Cuban Embargo Tactics

BY BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is seeking the declaration, 12 Soviet ships, craft, all of which would contribute to the strategic well-being of the Communist world. At least the United States thinks they would.

As for Cuba, the embargo sought by the United States can be effective only if all nations stop delivering goods to Cuba. Clearly the Communists have no such intention, and neither does a large part of the non-Communist world — England, France, Mexico, Spain, Canada and Morocco among others.

Creates Drain

What the U.S. policy does do, however, is to make life more difficult and expensive for the Cubans.

And, as Undersecretary of State George W. Ball has noted, it does bring about a drain on the economic reserves of the Communist nations, chiefly the Soviet Union which is pledged to Cuban support.

At the same time, however, the U.S. policy penalizes other-wise friendly nations by laying down the rule that ships which have delivered cargoes to Cuba cannot stop in any U.S. port for specific cargoes. In this case lines, machine tools, machinery, the missiles. After the quarantine chemicals and commercial air-transport, 12 Soviet ships, craft, all of which would contribute to the strategic well-being of the Communist world. At least the United States thinks they would.

Enforcement Key

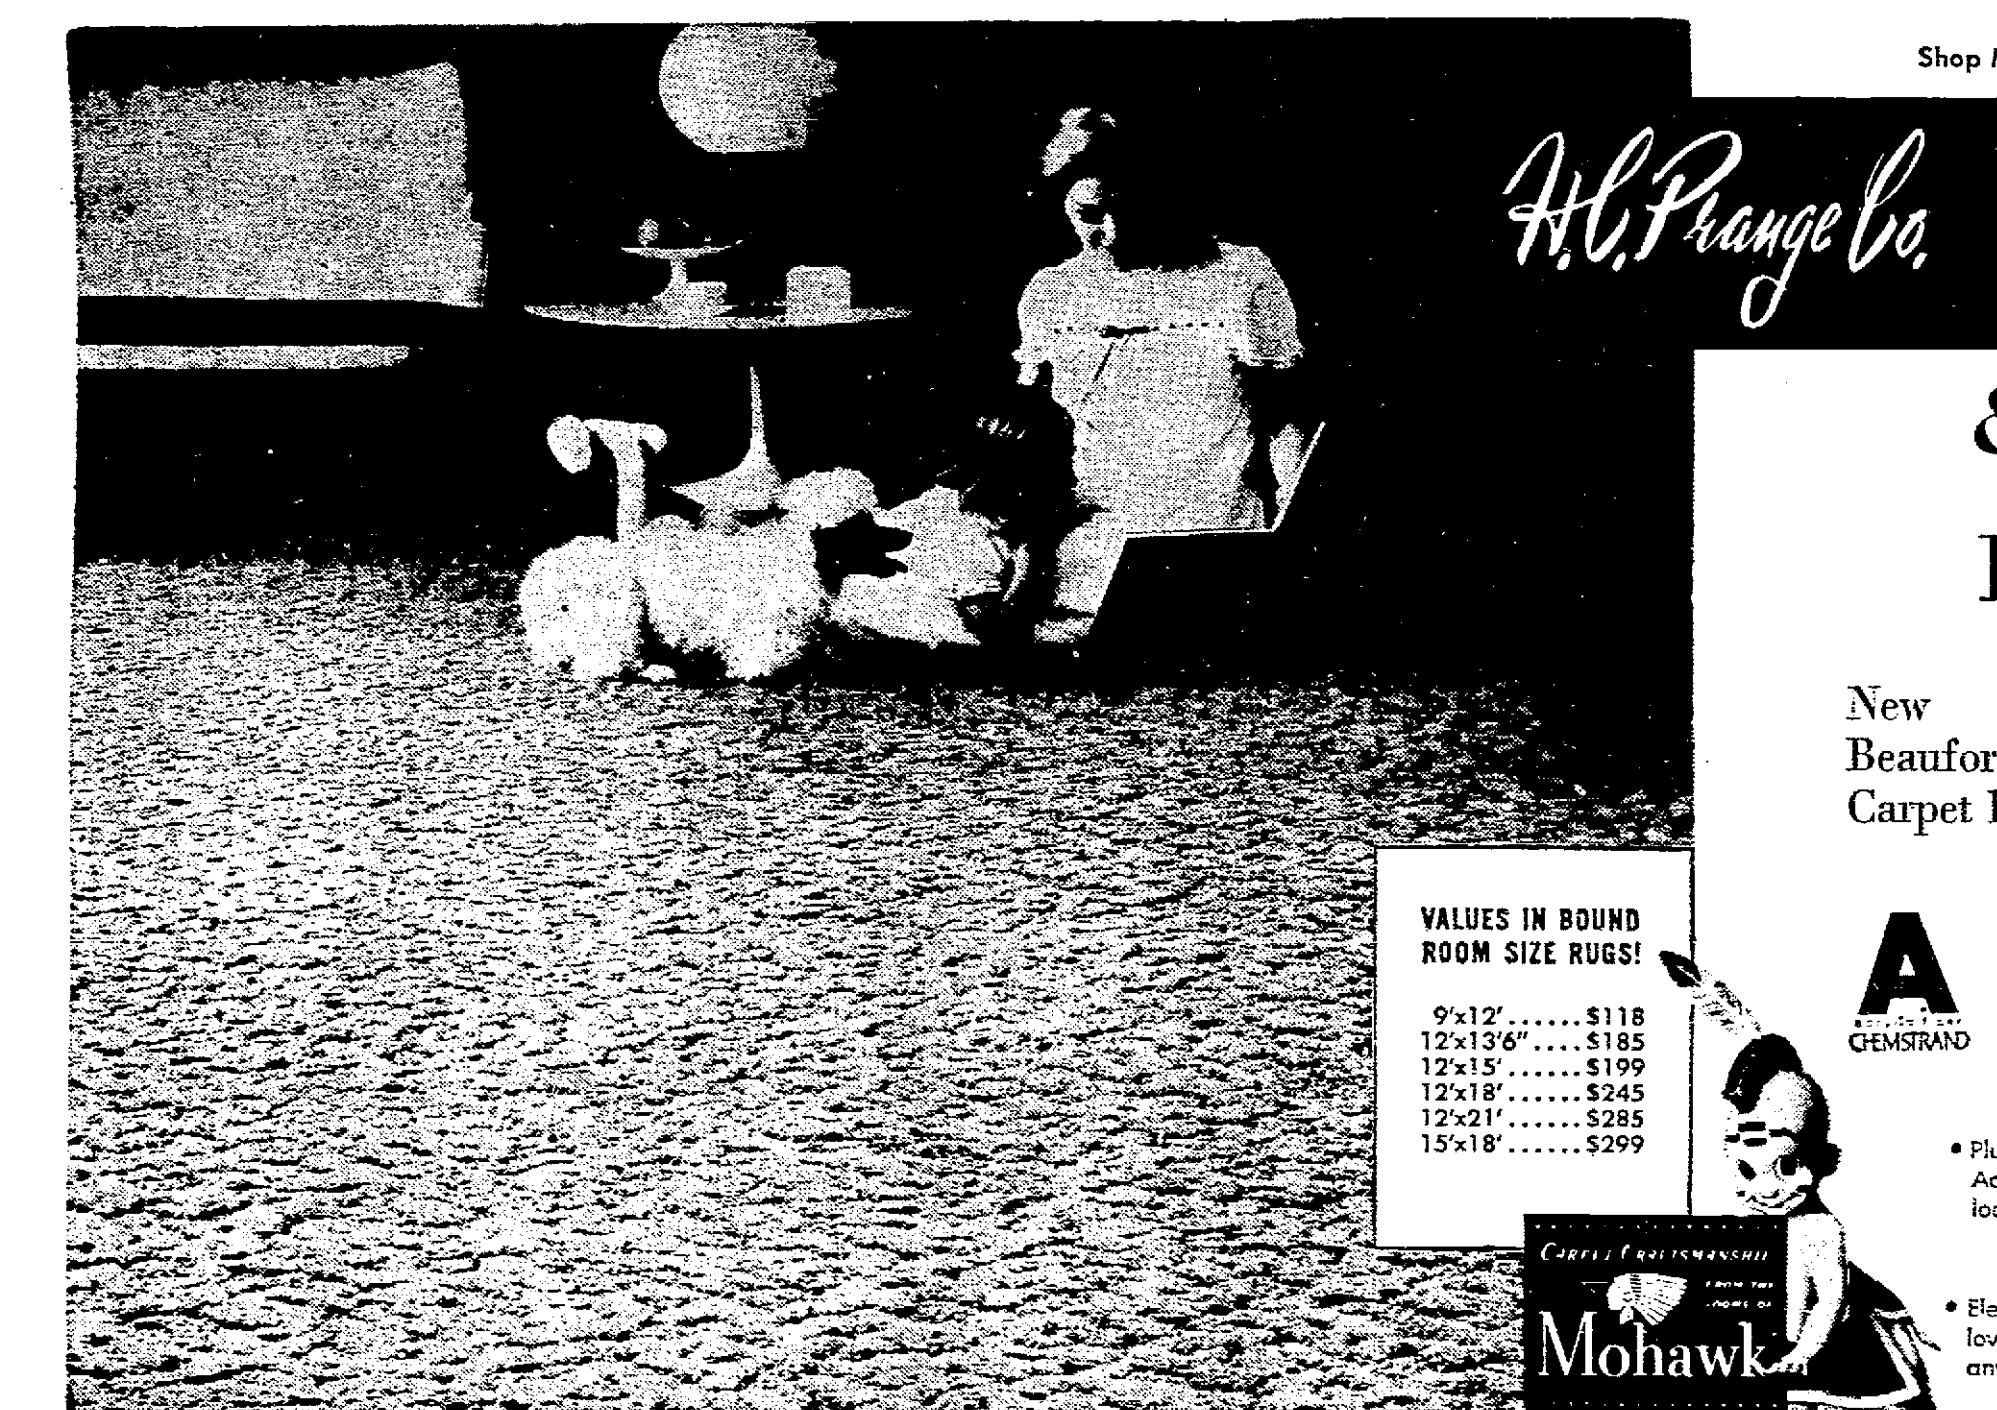

A blockade is only as good as the armed forces prepared to enforce it. The land equivalent of a blockade is the siege. The primary purpose is to strangle the enemy's food and war supplies.

An embargo is of dubious value, regardless of the size of the nation against which it is used. For instance, since 1951 the United States has been trying to persuade industrial nations to refrain from shipping strategic goods to Communist-bloc nations. But even the nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) cannot agree on what constitutes strategic goods.

Western Trade

In 1961—the last year for which complete figures are available—the Communist-bloc nations imported $5 billion worth of goods from the Western world. The trade is still growing.

Starlite Club By-Passes Fond du Lac Town Board

hard liquor from the premises and notified the town board that only beer would be sold, although still holding both licenses.

State law says persons under 21 years of age are prohibited from being on the premises of an establishment with a liquor license. The minimum legal age for beer drinking is 18. However, Dist. Atty. Thomas Massey says the attorney general's office gave an informal opinion that persons under 21 can be in the Starlite Club while the liquor license is "inactive". Massey said he obtained the ruling from William Platz, an assistant attorney general, who indicated similar situations are popping up in the state.

Legal Battle
Attorney general's opinion or not — it appears a legal battle is shaping and may reach a climax if the town board attempts to shut the club down or compel the owners to revert it back to a tavern for persons over 21 years of age.

The Starlite Club came under new ownership and management late last summer. Since then it featured live entertainment practically every night, including dance bands and vocal groups, but the financial success of the nightclub operation was questionable.

As a result, two weeks ago the owners sent town officials a notice they were changing over to a "minor night club for young adults 18 years of age and over."

Bar Owners
Officials of the corporation owning and operating the club are: Atty. Peter Porath, 85 Woodland Ct.; Atty. Michael Porath, 286 Fifth St.; and Miss Joan Dietz, 52 E. 13th St.

Porath represented Mrs. LeRoy Sommers of Fond du Lac, who claimed her husband, a cheese factory operator was murdered. Eventually she made an out-of-court settlement with his insurance company, dropping a $175,000 lawsuit for $30,000. Sommers' death was officially listed as a suicide and the company refused to pay off on his life insurance policies which contained a suicide clause.

Porath's brother, Michael, is married to Mrs. Sommers' daughter. There had been speculation that all were active in the operation of the Starlite Club, along with Ron Harvey, a local disc jockey and bandleader.

People Furious
Town Chairman Chester Costello said residents in the area are "furious about the place being made into a minor bar." He said several made complaints about "noise, kids walking along the highway and cars parked for blocks on both sides of the road."

Last weekend, according to Costello, the area was in uproar because of crowds of young people gathering on the highway. "Cars were parked on both sides of the road as far as you could see," Costello claimed. "And this is all taking place in an area where there are people with $20,000 and $30,000 homes," Costello added. He said it has been the strict policy of the town board not to permit minor bars in the township.

Owner's Notice
In his notice to the town, Atty. Peter Porath said in part: "We are operating now under our beer and liquor license with liquor off the premises. This is legal according to the department of beverage and taxation."

"We realize that minor bars should be controlled and supervised by the town board and we intend to make application in due course to the town board and expect to follow whatever requirements they demand. Fond du Lac needs a minor bar for non-adults. This has been indicated by parents and young adults themselves," Porath added.

There is one minor bar in the city proper and authorities say lights are on, the streets are lighted. It is still cold. Does the earth rumble ominously? Do people get out of their cars and look at each other, puzzled — or frightened?

Alaska has had occasional earthquakes — short, sharp, severe — but nothing like this within the memory of living man. Then the rumbling increases and the earth shudders cataclysmically. People hang onto their cars or reach for a shuddering building, grab the arm of a stranger, ask the question: "What the hell is happening?"

A beat-up building leans, puffs and the glass falls, tinkling onto the sidewalk. A crack opens swiftly in the road and then broadens. The front wheels of a car slip in and horror comes to the crowded blue-white city. Men are swearing and women are reaching for children.

Then I wonder about Hal Anderson, a friend of mine whose office is on Fourth Avenue. Surely his old building crashed. But would he be there?

Oranges Tipping

I think about the modest supermarket on Fifth Avenue, and I think of expensive oranges tipping wholesale into the aisles, and of women shoppers grabbing display cases, and falling. I imagine, somehow, that there are screams and prayers. I can hear breaking glass. I can hear buildings crack and lean and totter to the streets with minor roars while the earth rumbles hollowly and the people understand helplessly what is happening.

I think dead people lie under the rubble of the buildings. I think the drunken Eskimos who hang around Ole's Bar are staring and frightened and are wishing that they were far back in the bush with their own people, decent, undrunk this time.

I think of a quiet Indian who stands so often in front of the hotel, his dark eyes contemplating the world as it falls around him. I do not see him perturbed, for he was always silent.

Alone, Cool

Dressed in a seal parka with a hood framed in wolverine fur, he stands, his feet braced against the agitation of the earth while he looks coolly, insolently at the havoc. I think he alone is cool.

Alaska is an Eskimo word which means "the great land." Now she has raised her voice in anguish to outcry its geographic name. Texas. It is not nice to hear her cry nor to think of the California work which has E. Robinson, 33, medical officer, sent its saddest hours — each a tiny tragedy, a sorrowful, integral part of the entire.

The great land has roared and its voice may be heard above that of Texas.

there has been no problem. Costello and other town officials said, with regard to the Starlite Club, that there have been no reports of misconduct.

Public Hearing
On his radio shows, Ron Harvey has been "plugging" the Starlite, telling his listeners the area needs a place for young adults to go.

Costello said the town board intends to hold a public hearing "in the near future" to find out if township residents back the board's policy, or want to permit minor bars to operate there.

"Since no application for a minor bar has been made to the board, the township is notifying the club that no vested rights are in the club for a new license next July," Costello said.

Final Say

The club's beer and liquor licenses will be up for renewal June 30.

An attorney for the township indicated the board has the final say as to whether the Starlite Club can operate as a minor bar because it is the official licensing body. He said the statute permits a municipality to adopt an ordinance prohibiting minor bars.

Gordon W. Cory, chief enforcement officer of the state beverage and tax division, Madison, could not be reached, and Sheriff Ray Howard also was out of the city on county business and unavailable for comment.

Dist. Atty. Massey said Porath asked him about two weeks ago whether state law prohibited the present Starlite Club license arrangement. "I searched the statutes and found nothing," Massey said, "so I contacted state officials, including the attorney general's office."

Massey said state officials advised him a licensee may withdraw liquor from the establishment, making the license "inactive," and then give notice to the governing body.

"The problem is apparent in some other parts of the state," a high-ranking enforcement official said, and there has been no major court test as yet. However, the Town of Fond du Lac may set the precedent.

New Life-Support System Is Being Tested by 5 Men

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—For 25 days, five men have been locked in a windowless L-shaped box, eating freeze-dried food, breathing the same air over-and-over, and drinking water reclaimed from wastes.

The test of life-support systems, and the men themselves, for a future space, station or moon base will end April 1.

The Boeing Co. is conducting the experiment for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It is described as the first ever tried in this country providing full support for space travel.

With five days to go, the men were reported in good spirits and health. Only Roger Baragans, 28, the crew commander, has lost any weight—down six pounds from the 228 he had weighed.

Three of the five are married. Alaska is an Eskimo word which means "the great land." Now she has raised her voice in anguish to outcry its geographic name. Texas. It is not nice to hear her cry nor to think of the California work which has E. Robinson, 33, medical officer, sent its saddest hours — each a tiny tragedy, a sorrowful, integral part of the entire.

The great land has roared and its voice may be heard above that of Texas.

Mau Mau Head Holds Reins in Youthful Kenya

Jomo Kenyatta Wins Praise, Honors for Courage, Foresight

BY LYNN HEINZERLING

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—They are going to raise a statue of tough old Jomo Kenyatta in front of the Parliament building. There was not a murmur of dissent to the government's proposal to honor Kenya's first prime minister. Less than three years ago, Kenyatta was serving a seven-year prison sentence as a convicted leader of the Mau Mau conspiracy, put down at great loss of life by British troops. The British governor of Kenya, Sir Patrick Renison, described the bearded Mau Mau chief as late as 1961 as a "leader to darkness and death."

Since Kenya became the 35th independent nation in Africa last December, Kenyatta has emerged as a moderate leader of the Kenya army with a sure grasp of his country's problems and the political realities of a young nation. Although he is enthusiastic hailed throughout Kenya as the father of the nation. Kenyatta shows no symptoms of the megalomania which afflicts some other African leaders. He lives simply in a not particularly elaborate house formerly occupied by the Agalional, nationalist fervor to use the plain foreign troops against his own countrymen. But Kenyatta and his government realized that a sustained and successful mutiny could mean the same chaos which claimed large contiguous areas in both Kenya and Ethiopia.

Used Courage
It took courage and foresight in the face of Africa's antimutiny what contribution Britain has supported the army in the past. Discussions are under way to determine what may make in the future building up its army with Soviet help. Kenya is looking to its border with Somalia and planning similar steps. Somali has mean the same chaos which claimed large contiguous areas in both Kenya and Ethiopia.
